PHONE CALL FROM BEYOND THE GRAVE

Cop's ghost saves child's life!

OVER the phone, long dead police dispatcher Marie Voisart helps distressed mom Catherine Clement revive little Laura.

By HENRY WEBER

Authorities say the ghost of a dead police dispatcher told a frantic mother how to administer CPR and save the life of her dying child!

"I know it sounds like something out of a movie but it happened, it really and truly happened," Police Capt. Robert Genestar told reporters in Nancy, France.

"The young woman who called us for help told us that dispatcher Marie Voisart told her how to revive her dying baby.

"She couldn't have known it, but Marie Voisart was killed in an auto accident. Marie Voisart died on August 14, 1979."

The strange drama unfolded when Catherine Clement, 26, found her three-year-old daughter, Laura, face-down and motionless on the bottom of a backyard pool.

She got the little girl out of the water — then realized she didn't have the emergency skills to revive her.

"I was hysterical but managed to call the police to ask what I should do," said Mrs. Clement. "The woman on the other end of the line spoke very reassuringly and calmed me enough to listen to her instructions. She told me how to drain the water out of Laura's lungs and administer CPR to get her breathing again.

"When I finally did, I was so grateful that I wanted everyone to know what she had done.

"She told me her name was Marie Voisart. And just to make sure I had it right, I wrote the name down. I also jotted down the time.

"It was 11:20 a.m."

Police Capt. Genestar confirmed that Mrs. Clement placed an emergency call to police headquarters.

He also noted that the regular dispatcher had walked away from his console, leaving it unmanned, when Mrs. Clement had apparently gotten through.

"Our telephone calls are recorded automatically and this one was no exception," said the cop. "When we play back the tape all we can hear is Mrs. Clement.

"Judging from what she says, it would appear that she is asking questions of and taking instructions from someone who we can't hear. Mrs. Clement says that someone was Marie Voisart. And she did save the life of her child, so it must be true."

Paranormal researcher Raymond Rioni said that the case is unusual but not without precedent.

"There have been quite a few instances of spirits reaching from beyond the grave to assist the living," said the Paris-based expert. "It seems impossible. But it does happen every now and then."

"Maria loved children," said Capt. Genestar. "She has handled child emergencies before, and always made sure that our officers attended to them immediately, when she was alive," he added. "She's still on the job."

Governor frees murderer who kills again, cops say

A murderer who was freed from prison by a bleeding heart governor after serving less than two years is now accused in another slaying.

Fred E. Smith Jr., 47, was sentenced to 10 years in prison in 1977 for shooting his second wife to death.

But former Tennessee governor Ray Blanton set Smith free by executive clemency.

Cops in Lafayette, Tenn., now say Smith has admitted that he bludgeoned his third wife, Kathy Smith, 32, with a hammer.

Man jumps to his death after brakes fail!

Lewis Baker made a big mistake when he jumped from a dump truck after its brakes failed — he was killed, but the truck was barely damaged!

Baker was riding with his 32-year-old brother Mike when the brakes failed on a highway skirting a deep gully outside Farmington.

his brother managed to stop the runaway vehicle by ramming it into a guard rail.

Baker apparently died of injuries he received when he struck the pavement.

"My brother jumped and he didn't have to," Mike Baker told police.

To catch suspected drunk driver who slammed into his car . . .

Hit-and-run victim takes wild 10-mile rooftop ride!

GUTSY Mike Fitzgerald, 20, rode 10 miles on the roof of a fleeing car.

By DICK DONOVAN

Hopping-mad motorist Mike Fitzgerald took a death-defying 10-mile high-speed ride down a Pennsylvania freeway — clinging by his fingertips to the roof of a fleeing hit-and-run car!

And when cops closed in on the car after it finally stopped at a suburban Pittsburgh nightspot, it was 20-year-old Mike — not the driver — who was put under arrest.

"They probably thought I was a lunatic," Mike told The NEWS. "But when I explained what had happened — that the guy had hit my car and then took off — they arrested the other guy.

"But they kept looking at me, funny like. One of them said I must be crazy to do what I did. I just know I hope I never have to do it again."

Mike's hair-raising roof ride began at 1:30 a.m., when he left the home of a friend just in time to see a car skid sideways and slam into his car parked at the curb.

"The car backed up and then started to drive off," Mike recalled. "I just jumped onto the roof from the driver's side with my head facing the passenger side.

"I kicked at the windshield, but that didn't do anything. So I slid myself around until I was facing the front of the car with my fingers gripping the rain gutters."

The car wound its way through city streets before it merged with late-night traffic on the Penn Lincoln Parkway for a 10-mile dash at a speed Mike estimated to be 65 m.p.h.

"No one passed us," Mike said. "We were passing everyone else. It must have been quite a sight for those people who saw me sprawled out on the roof of that car.

"But all I was worried about was where the guy was going and when he would stop. It was chilly and my fingers were getting numb.

"Finally, he pulled into a place where there were a lot of cars and one of them was a State Police car.

"I had jumped off the roof and was going to pull the guy out of the car when an officer pulled me away and told me I was under arrest.

"I told him, 'If I'm under arrest, so is that guy. He hit my car and took off.' When they learned what really happened, everything was fine."

Police identified the driver as 18-year-old Brian Scheidter. He was charged with drunken driving, reckless endangerment, reckless driving, leaving the scene of an accident, hit and-run driving and under-age drinking.

"Jumping on that car isn't something I want to do again," Mike admitted. "But I had bought my car two months ago, and now it's wrecked and the guy who hit it was getting away."

Patient dies in surgery after . . .

Heartless doc walks out in mid-operation!

A brilliant young surgeon has been charged with murder because he packed up his instruments and went home midway through open heart surgery!

"The patient bled to death on the operating table because the doctor left before the operation was finished," Chinese medical board chief Hsieh Teng-Chi told reporters in Beijing.

"It is madness for a trained surgeon to behave in such a manner," he continued. "Needless to say, he has been stripped of his practice. He will probably go to prison as well."

The accused murderer, Dr. Shen Zhou, 28, has refused to discuss the alleged operating room incident with either police or reporters.

But staffers at the People's Regional Hospital, where the surgeon practiced, said he was known as a clock-watcher who refused to put in long hours even if it was obvious that patients were going to suffer.

"Shen Zhou was a smart man but he didn't care about anybody but himself," nurse Ming San-Lein told reporters. "On the day of the murder he seemed to be particularly self-centered.

"He was less than halfway looked up at the wall clock, put down his scalpel and took off his smock.

"Then he pulled down his mask and said: 'It's five o'clock and my day is finished. I'm going home.'

"There were several doctors and assistants present in the operating room and all of us were too shocked to speak.

"When Dr. Shen actually left we went into a panic. None of us had the skills to finish the heart operation. We tried to help the patient but he died while we watched."

Bear outfoxes cops

New Jersey cops have spent weeks searching for the cutest fugitive on their most-wanted list — an 80-pound bear cub hiding out in a huge cornfield.

Wacky kids are wearing live rats in their hair!

Rats! School officials are stamping out a promising new fad — just because a few cowardly complainers didn't like going to class with live rodents.

It seems that the latest thing among students in France is wearing live pet rats in your hair, and exchange student Valerie Hennequin brought the idea with her when she showed up for high school in Vernon, British Columbia.

Canadian kids instantly saw the merits of the mad fad and bought their own rats to carry around. That's when some of their classmates got fed up.

"It is just disgusting," fumed student Cora Henault, 15. "Until they get rid of the rats, I'm not going back to school.

"They put them in their shirts and even put them in their mouths with just the tail hanging out. It's pretty gross.

"I'm not going to sit in class with these rats that carry disease."

Valerie, 18, insisted the craze is harmless.

"I don't think it's a problem — it's not dangerous," she said. "A lot of people have them in France. Mine is black and white — she's a baby, she's cute."

But school authorities thought it best to ban the pests.

Student Curt Hounslow said he's relieved officials have put an end to the rodent rage.

"I'm not allowed to take a pit bull to school," he said. "So why should they be able to take rats?"

SHARING a room in the maternity ward are 37-year-old grandma Deborah Miller, left, holding her son Michael, and her 20-year-old daughter Amanda Beasley with her newborn daughter Alyssa.

Woman becomes a grandma one day — and a mother the next!

By JACK ALEXANDER

Amazing Deborah Miller became a grandmother one day and a mother the next.

"It sounds kind of strange when you say it that way, but it's true," said Deborah, 37. "We didn't plan it — not by a long shot. It just happened."

Her daughter, Amanda Beasley, 20, gave birth to a 6-pound, 11-ounce daughter, Alyssa, at 10:50 p.m. on October 12 at Reid Memorial Hospital in Richmond, Ind.

At 5:10 p.m. the next day, Deborah gave birth to a 9-pound, 7-ounce son, Michael, at the same hospital.

Mother and daughter shared a room after their babies were born.

"The deliveries were normal. The babies are normal, thank God, but I don't want any more," said Deborah, who also has another daughter, Megan, 2. "Mike and I have been married nine years and we both wanted a son," she said. "And now that we have one, we're going to bow out of the baby-making business.

"I had a really rotten pregnancy," Deborah said. "I was sick right down to the last minute. I was 16 days past due and spent 10 hours in labor.

"Don't count on me and Mike being part of the baby boom anymore. Grandmas aren't supposed to have babies," Deborah said.

Amanda's pregnancy was as smooth as Deborah's was rough. "It was a breeze all the way for her," said the vivacious granny.

Baby Alyssa was the first child for Amanda and her hubby, Bryan, who've been married a year and live about 20 miles from Richmond in Eaton, Ohio.

Teenager takes fatal plunge through school skylight!

By RAFE KLINGER

Happy teen Rabsary Gutierrez went to the roof of her high school with classmates to take a picture for the yearbook, stepped on a skylight and plunged two stories into the stairwell below!

Two days later, the 16-year-old Hialeah, Fla., girl died from the injuries she suffered in the fall.

"She was an excellent student and a wonderful kid. It's just a tragedy. The entire student body is torn up," said Miami-Hialeah Lakes High Vice Principal Vincent Hynes.

"Students weren't supposed to go near the skylight area on the roof of the four-story building," said Hynes.

Rabsary had gone up to take a photo with the 25 other members of the Anchor Club, a service organization for top students. The girl reportedly put her hands on two friends on either side for support.

It cracked and she fell through.

"I thought it was hard because I was going to walk over it myself," said student Lissette Rodriquez.

Lissette said she didn't hear the skylight crack and there was no scream. All of a sudden, one of the students yelled:

"Who fell?"

Lissette said, "It happened so fast. Rabsary didn't even scream."

She and the other students peered through the shattered skylight and saw the battered body of their friend lying in the stairwell below.

Scam artist counterfeits lottery ticket — and cashes it for $15M!

By PETE COOKE

A state lottery official and his friend came up with a scheme to collect an unclaimed jackpot of $15.2 million — and got the first installment of $469,989 before being arrested.

Henry Rich, 33-year-old troubleshooter for the computer firm that operates the Pennsylvania lottery, is facing 10 years in prison after pleading guilty to charges stemming from his intricate scheme.

Robert Gentzel, a spokesman for the state attorney general's office, said the scam involved Pennsylvania's Super 7 game, in which players pick 13 numbers and win if the seven numbers drawn are among those on their ticket.

In July 1987, the Super 7 jackpot totalled $15,274,660.44 and although the lottery computer showed that a winning ticket had been issued, no one stepped forward to claim the prize.

"As a troubleshooter for the computer company that handled the main computer in the lottery, Rich was equipped with the knowledge of what all 13 numbers on the winning ticket were," Gentzel said. "He also had access to a ticket terminal, so he printed himself a ticket with the right numbers on it."

Because of his position Rich knew it would be impossible for him to show up to claim the prize, so he enlisted the help of his friend, Mark Herbst, a 33-year-old video store worker.

Last April 8, Herbst appeared at lottery headquarters in Harrisburg with the bogus ticket and laid claim to the fortune.

Herbst told lottery officials that he'd been using the ticket as a bookmark while reading the epic Shogun and forgot all about it. After verifying that the ticket bore all the correct numbers, officials scheduled a big press conference and handed Herbst the first installment check.

But within a few days the scam unraveled when authorities examined the ticket in more detail.

"The only thing Henry Rich did wrong was to pick the stock number on the roll of ticket paper and that's how we got on to him," Gentzel said.

Rich and Herbst pleaded guilty to charges of theft, conspiracy tampering with public records and forgery. Both await sentencing.

COMPUTER whiz Henry Rich, 33, printed up a winning lottery ticket and had a friend cash it in.

Radio fans turned off by macho dad's sex swap

AFTER — Deejay Glenn Richards becomes Carolyne Munroe.

Deejay who charmed the ladies — becomes one!

Debonair deejay Glenn Richards charmed thousands of lady listeners with his booming baritone voice and raked in big bucks for personal appearances — until the two-fisted Irishman became a busty blonde bombshell!

By JOE BERGER

Golden-throated Glenn, 45, still titillates female fans with his manly voice — but now he does it wearing frilly blouses and lacy black lingerie.

"I just hope my radio listeners will stick by me and accept me for what I am," the sex-swap sweetie told reporters in Torquay, England.

"On the outside I have a 40-inch bust, but on the inside I'm still the same person."

But gender-bending Glenn's sex-switch surgery jolted a legion of admirers who had no idea the macho father of two dreamed of becoming a snip-and-tuck temptress. "I may never listen to the radio again," gasped one distraught damsel.

"Oh, I just can't bear the thought of Glenn Richards in a bra and panties."

The make-believe miss — who longs to be called Carolyne Munroe — underwent three years of hormone treatments before his recent sex-swap operation.

And even though folks aren't begging him to make personal appearances as they used to, record-spinnin' Glenn is chirping with joy over his sleek new physique.

"I've never been so poor, but I've never been so happy," gushed the bogus belle.

"I've known for a long time that I was meant to be a woman and I'm just glad I had the courage to see it through. I've got a whole new life waiting for me now and I'm eager to get on with it."

Woman attacked after she breaks back in plunge from bridge!

By PETE COOKE

As she crawled for help after breaking her back in a fall from a train trestle Tina Vollmer was attacked by a creep who threatened to rape her, then punched her in the face and stole her purse!

"I thought I was going to die," the 34-year-old Tempe, Ariz., woman said after the horrifying ordeal.

GUTSY Tina Vollmer lost her purse to the creep who attacked her after her terrifying fall from a bridge.

Miss Vollmer later told authorities that the nightmare began when she and her boyfriend, Paul Boppart, got into a spat after a night on the town and she decided to walk home.

As she crossed a railroad bridge Miss Vollmer turned and saw a speeding train rumbling toward her.

"It was right on top of me," she said. The startled woman lost her footing and tumbled off the train trestle, landing on the dry and rocky river bottom 20 feet below.

In the fall Miss Vollmer broke three vertebrae in her back and dislocated her elbow, but she began crawling over the rugged terrain to find help.

She'd managed to drag herself about 100 feet in three hours when her desperate cries for help attracted the attention of a man who "came out of nowhere."

Miss Vollmer said the stranger "probably heard me hollering. I was hollering and screaming, 'Please help me.'"

But help wasn't what the man had on his mind, Miss Vollmer said.

After he hit her twice in the face the stranger threatened to rape her, she said. The quick-thinking victim offered to give her purse to the attacker, who took it and fled.

After the brutal attack Miss Vollmer continued to crawl toward a road until a passing motorist spotted her body and stopped.

"I thought it was a bunch of rags off the side of the road," said Jon LaFoy, who was driving by on his way to work when he saw the injured woman. "Then I saw a hand waving."

Miss Vollmer was released after spending several days in St. Luke's Hospital.

Police say they have no suspects in the bizarre attack.

Wasp hunter torches his house!

George Sparks made a costly goof when he went after a nest of wasps with a blowtorch — and set his house on fire.

"I boo-booed," said downtrodden Sparks, 67, after firemen doused the flames on his home in Fontana, Calif. The elderly homeowner earlier had used the propane torch to kill wasps in his backyard, so he decided to use it on a nest closer to his house.

It cost him a house, but he did destroy the wasps.

Celebrities should fear their lovesick fans, says study

Starstruck fans who write love letters to celebrities are just as likely to make direct contact with their idols as those who threaten or send hate mail.

That's the conclusion of researcher Park Dietz, a professor of law and psychiatry at the University of Virginia.

Some of the worst incidents have been preceded by a love letter or some other peculiar or inappropriate communication, said Dietz.

The researcher said laws in many states need to be expanded to cover harassment by would-be lovers.

He singled out Canadian farmer Robert Kieling, who has been convicted 11 times since 1980 of harassing Canadian-born country singer-songwriter Anne Murray. He is convinced she is in love with him.

Kieling, 52, called her office 263 times the first six months of this year after a judge ordered him not to contact the singer or her family.

The wedding video was so bad the tearful bride and groom are doing it all over again!

By SUSAN JIMISON

Michael and Claire Narramore got married in September, but they're planning on going through the ceremony again — because they didn't like the wedding video the first time around!

The couple plans to restage their church wedding, the trip to the reception by horse-drawn carriage and the entire wedding reception. The replay will cost as much as the $35,000 they spent on the original marriage celebration.

It may cost another $35G to stage the live replay

"For them the wedding is a lifetime thing, and right now they have no record of it," said Rita Lockett, the 21-year-old bride's mother, in Torquay, England. "You've got to have something to show your kids later on.

"We hired a company to do the video and they recorded the wedding from 10 a.m. before the ceremony to 1 a.m. the following day. Out of that we got eight minutes of video and that was awful."

Mrs. Lockett says she's suing the video company, but meanwhile she wants to console her daughter. And the only way to make up for the disastrous video, she says, is to record the whole thing over again in a second ceremony.

"The first video was dreadful," she told The NEWS. "The camera just sort of jumped around. He missed the bride coming down the aisle because he photographed the guests instead.

"He missed them coming out of the church and when he took pictures of them riding in the carriage to their reception, all he got was the back of their heads.

"When he photographed them signing the register, all you can see is the groom's hand and the bride's veil. It could have been anybody's picture. And when we asked the man why it came out so badly, he said, 'What do you expect? It was only a wedding!' "

Mrs. Lockett, who owns an old-age home in Torquay, says her daughter has been inconsolable ever since she viewed the botched video.

She is hoping the second ceremony will make matters right. "It was a beautiful wedding and they must have it over again so there's some record of it," she said. "We'll have to pay for it all again. But since we decided to do this Claire has been happier. The bad video destroyed her wedding happiness."

This is the face of King Midas!

By IRWIN FISHER

Experts rebuild head of the golden monarch

Scientists amazingly used a 2,700-year-old skull to reconstruct the head of King Midas, who according to legend turned everything he touched into gold!

British archaeologist John Prag and illustrator Richard Neave accomplished the feat with plaster and clay.

The experts said they were able to recreate the ancient king's features with pinpoint accuracy, based on modern knowledge of the way tissue and skin fit over the human a team of American archaeologists who discovered King Midas' tomb and remains in central Turkey in 1957.

She called the recreated face "striking" and said it matches up with the single terra-cotta figure of King Midas that is still in existence today.

According to Greek mythology, King Midas was granted the god of wine. The gift became a curse, however, when the king accidentally turned his daughter and even his food into gold.

Historians say the Greek legend was probably inspired by King Midas' incredible wealth. It is believed that he ruled Phrygia, in what is now Turkey, almost 3,000 years ago, from 738 B.C. to 696 B.C.

Choking woman saved by salesman — 2,500 miles away!

By JACK ALEXANDER

Heroic salesman Sam Smith was 2,500 miles away when an aged, wheelchair-bound woman gasped for air as she choked on a piece of melon — but he saved her life.

Smith was in his Dallas, Tex., office when he phoned Vadine Ostlind in Sacramento, Calif., to give her an estimate for aluminum house siding.

But Mrs. Ostlind's invalid mother, Corene Newton, answered the phone. She was choking on a bite of melon and pleaded for help.

"Her voice was raspy," said Smith. "She was gasping for air. She was choking badly."

The alert salesman hung up, called the Texas operator who quickly connected him with emergency 911 in Sacramento. He gave police the address from a card he had on file from Mrs. Ostlind.

"I called the Ostlind house again, but the phone apparently was off the hook," he said.

"I guess she didn't have enough strength to hang it back up." Paramedics rushed to the house and worked on the woman for a half hour. She was taken to University Medical Center, where she coughed up the melon chunk and was later released.

If she hadn't coughed up the melon, doctors would have had to perform a tracheotomy, said Mrs. Ostlind.

"If it hadn't been for him calling, mother wouldn't be alive today," said the thankful daughter. "He saved her life."

Dr. James Schlund agreed that the small piece of melon could have killed Mrs. Newton. Her poor health made the situation even more dangerous, he said.

Salesman Smith, who's with AMRE Inc., doesn't picture himself as a hero. "I just happened to phone the house at the right time," he said. "I'm just happy I was able to help.

"It was a miracle. That's all it was, a miracle," he said. "I call 300 people a day and the chance of me calling that person at that time was slim to none."

Smith works for a company that subcontracts for Sears. Mrs. Ostlind wanted to know the cost of putting aluminum or vinyl siding on her house.

Hooker tries to trick cop, police charge

A street hooker tried to trap an undercover cop by asking him twice to expose himself, but her trick backfired — and he arrested her for asking him to do it.

The unidentified Canadian prostitute suspected he was a cop and knew he wouldn't commit a criminal act. She had that right.

She was arrested and booked at a Toronto jail on two counts of counseling a person to commit an indecent act and one of obstructing justice.

LOVEBIRDS Ruben and Laurel Griego now have a new life ahead of them.

One-in-a-million couple have . . .

His 'n' her kidneys

By DICK DONOVAN

Medically speaking, Ruben and Laurel Griego are one of the rarest married couples on record — they had kidney transplants less than two months apart!

Dr. Chakko Kuruvila, the Colorado couple's transplant doctor, said it's very rare for both a husband and wife to undergo kidney transplants.

But being a one-of-a-kind couple isn't really all that important to Ruben and Laurel who live in Englewood, a Denver suburb.

What really matters is that they don't have to spend their lives hooked up to a kidney dialysis machine.

"It was scary and something we had to think about," 41-year-old Laurel told The NEWS. "But for me, it really wasn't that big a decision.

"I just felt that I'm still too young to spend my life tied to a dialysis machine."

For ex-boxer Ruben, who had two heart surgeries before his transplant, it was his own escape from the dialysis machine that prevented him from "going anywhere and doing anything."

"When I first heard the word 'dialysis,' I thought I'd just have to take another pill," 56-year-old Ruben said. "I soon found out I was way off the mark."

Ruben first learned he had kidney disease in 1982.

A year later he began his five-year stint on the kidney machine. A faulty valve that allowed urine to back-flow from the bladder to Laurel's kidneys was successfully treated with medication until 1987, when she was forced to join her husband on dialysis.

Then the death of an unidentified man in a car accident provided Laurel with her new kidney and, less than two months later, Ruben got his.

"We're both doing fine now," Laurel said. "And we both spend a lot of time at the Dialysis Center in Porter Hospital, counseling others who are going on dialysis or waiting for a transplant.

"They don't know what to expect . . . what's going to happen to them. But we've both been there and we know. We let them know that everything will be just fine."

Duchess' desperate bid to trim her 200 lbs. of pudge

FERGIE'S BIZARRE WEIGHT LOSS PLAN

BLIMP — Fergie's figure ballooned during her pregnancy, but she was no skinny Minnie to begin with.

Prince Andrew's tubby wife Sarah Ferguson underwent an embarrassing and health-endangering treatment to flush away 28 pounds from her sack-of-potato shape.

Fergie reportedly was desperate to trim the lard for a romantic trip with Andy to Australia. She had ballooned to 196 pounds during her pregnancy with baby Bea and went for the bizarre treatments after the birth on the suggestion of her slender sister-in-law Princess Di.

So she decided to try for a royal flush.

But the controversial treatments — known in medical circles as colonic irrigation — may threaten the young royal's health.

"This is a fashionable but stupid way to slim," said Dr. Martin Eastwood. "It's a cheap trick that works by clearing the few pounds of waste that are always in the bowel."

The colonic involves pumping gallons of water into a patient's intestines to flush out waste products.

The method is nothing but a glorified enema.

Dr. Eastwood said there is danger in the method because it also flushes out valuable minerals from the body that the system needs.

"A woman who's just had a baby would be more than usually vulnerable," he said.

The pudgy Fergie reportedly went for two treatments costing $75 each at

Gal claims she's Liz's secret child

The former fiancee of an English lord reportedly claims she is the secret child of Elizabeth Taylor.

Pretty 31-year-old Janie Ash, who pals say looks stunningly like Liz, was adopted and brought up in South Africa. But Janie, formerly engaged to Lord Barber, says Liz gave birth to a secret child in 1957 and she is that child.

Janie's claim appears outlandish because her birthday is nearly the same as the birth date of Liz's daughter Liza Todd, whose dad was the famed producer Mike Todd.

Gospel deejay canned for naughty talk

By JOHN BLACKBURN

Accidentally interrupting a Sunday morning radio broadcast of inspirational gospel music with sexual grunts and naughty language proved to be a sure way for a deejay to get himself defrocked.

And that's exactly what happened to a careless announcer at KAWW-FM in tiny Heber Springs, Ark.

The indiscreet deejay was canned, said station manager Chuck Howell, because while the religious music was playing, an open microphone picked up "some stuff going on" in the studio.

Howell wouldn't elaborate — but said the announcer was completely unaware the hanky-panky was being broadcast. One stunned regular listener of the three-hour Sunday radio show said he couldn't believe his ears when he heard about 30 seconds of "explicit sexual sounds" that he described as "grunting." He added that he also heard another voice rattling off what sounded like a steady stream of obscenities.

Scientists blast kitty bashing

Researcher Patricia Tornheim has come under criticism from a group of medical colleagues for her scientific investigations into the effects on cats of having their skulls shattered.

The University of Cincinnati Medical School scientist uses something called the Remington Humane Stunner to smash a metal disk onto the cats' heads, causing massive injuries.

"The more than $1 million in federal research dollars used to fund this research over the course of the past 14 years have been wasted on a futile and self-serving academic exercise," said one critic, Dr. Sylvia Askin-Edgar.

Dr. Askin-Edgar and 19 other emergency room doctors had been asked to comment on Dr. Tornheim's project, which is designed to provide data on human head injuries.

World record one-ton turtle washes ashore

The one-ton body of the world's largest known leatherback turtle was discovered after it washed up on a beach.

"We had to weigh it on a crane and it weighed 2,000 pounds," said zoologist Peter Morgan of Cardiff, Wales.

"It is 8½ feet long from its head to the end of its tail and nearly 10 feet wide," Morgan said. "It appears to be a world record. I doubt whether they grow much bigger."

The giant turtle's remains were found on a beach in Cardigan Bay.

Researchers were hoping to find out how old the turtle was and why it died.

Morgan said leatherback turtles are very rare in Wales and this one was thought to have come all the way from the Caribbean.

Man lights cigarette and his house goes . . .

KABOOM!

By RAFE KLINGER

Long Island mailman Richard Leddy woke up in the morning, took a shower, lit a cigarette and the house he was standing in was blown to smithereens.

"It was the most devastating thing I've ever seen in my life," Pat Birbiglia, Leddy's neighbor across the street, told The NEWS.

"And we didn't know if they (Leddy and his mom Joan, 66) had gotten out. It took two minutes and the house was leveled. The only thing left standing was their fireplace."

Unknown to the 35-year-old

BITS and pieces are all that's left of Richard Leddy's home after his early morning cigarette sparked a gas explosion.

Gas leak fuels shocking blast hurling debris all over block!

Leddy, a gas leak had developed in a pipe outside his Bellmore, N.Y., home. Investigators say the natural gas seeped under the lawn into the house and when Leddy fired up his cigarette — KABOOM!

The force of the explosion was so great that it blasted the Leddy home to bits sending debris flying all over the block. Mrs. Birbiglia said the windows and doors and parts of the front of the Leddy home were hurled into the yards of every home across the street.

Incredibly, Leddy and his mother escaped death. She managed to get out of the inferno that followed with just a cut leg, said Mrs. Birbiglia. Leddy was hospitalized with second- and third-degree burns over half of his body.

"God was with them," said Mrs. Birbiglia. "I don't know how they ever got out."

Also lucky were the residents of the adjoining homes. The blast staggered the facing wall of John and Regina Middletons' home next door, shattering the windows and melting the vinyl siding. But the Middletons and their four kids escaped injury.

"I thought a car crashed into the house," said Mrs. Middleton. "I got out of bed and saw glass all over the living room. All I saw were flames and glass in my driveway."

Mrs. Middleton praised her older daughters Dawn, 13, and Kathleen, 11, for leading the younger two children out of the house to safety.

"I drilled them on fires," she said. "I told them if ever anything happens, get the little ones out.

"And they did."

Drunk driver shoots himself after killing woman!

By JACK ALEXANDER

Minutes after his speeding car slammed into another auto and killed a woman, a drunk driver whipped out a pistol at the scene — and blew his brains out.

"We'll never know exactly why he did it, but I suspect he didn't want to go back to prison and took the quick way out," said state police Capt. Ernie Loomis.

Drunken Ronald Paquette, 42, was barreling down a two-lane road in Rumney, N.H., passing a string of cars when he plowed head-on into a car, said Capt. Loomis.

Cops said Phylis Fowler, pulled her from the twisted wreckage of the other car. The driver, Ronald Paton, and his wife, Wendy, suffered several broken bones.

Paquette, who had been convicted of drunk driving seven times and had his driver's license taken away in 1981, was sitting in his car cal examiner Dr. John Bentwood arrived at the scene.

"Dr. Bentwood checked Paquette and he didn't seem to be seriously injured, so Bentwood went over to tend to the other victims," said Capt. Loomis.

Cops were helping attendants place the Patons in ambulances when they heard a shot from Paquette's car.

"Mr. Paquette was still breathing when officers grabbed the .22-caliber pistol from his hand, but he died about five minutes later," said Capt. Loomis.

Driving drunk apparently quette, according to Capt. Loomis. He was stripped of his driver's license again because of booze in 1985 and ordered not to drive for four years by a Grafton County Superior Court judge.

Paquette only recently was released from prison after spending a year there as an habitual offender. And lab tests showed he was driving drunk when Mrs. Fowler was killed.

"He would have surely faced a reckless homicide charge in this one," said Capt. Loomis. "That's probably why he put the gun to his Jilted gal sends poisoned candy to ex-beau and his new honey!

INTENDED VICTIMS Joanne Atkinson and Benjamin Benwell-Palmer discovered the dastardly plot.

PRETTY Juliette Cole was heartbroken when her boyfriend dumped her for another gal — and she decided to get even.

Sweet revenge

Heartbroken blonde Juliette Cole was so torn with jealousy that she gave her former beau Benjaman Benwell-Palmer and his new sweetheart a box of expensive Valentine candy — laced with poison!

But her scheme misfired because her love rival Joanne Atkinson, 22, couldn't stand the taste of the fancy rum truffles.

That's the bizarre tale that unfolded in a hushed London, England, courtroom as anguished Juliette, 24, pleaded guilty of attempting to harm her former boyfriend and his current girlfriend.

Med student Juliette told Judge Bernard Auld she still loved Benjamin.

She said she was determined to get revenge when he moved in to live with his new sweetie.

The lovesick lady said she decided to give Ben and Joanne some candy laced with mercury.

She explained that it was an idea she got from an old Agatha Christie novel.

"I wanted to teach them a lesson," jilted Juliette told the court.

But she said she checked with a poison-control unit to make sure the mercury wasn't deadly.

"I wanted to give them stomach pains and vomiting for at least a couple of days," she testified.

Jealous Juliette bought a box of candy and injected each piece with some mercury she took from thermometers.

Then she left the dangerously doctored chocolates at the door of Ben and Joanne's apartment.

Joanne found the gift, opened it and bit into a candy.

But she thought it tasted funny and spit it out.

When boyfriend Ben came

I wanted to teach them a lesson, she tells judge

But even though Juliette admitted trying to poison the lovebirds, Judge Auld set her free.

He said he thought the heartsick student had suffered enough.

"This was a foolish thing to do," the judge told her. "It could have caused considerable unpleasantness if one of the chocolates had been eaten.

"It is clear the breakup of your relationship affected you very deeply."

Hubby hires a 'hit' messenger to deliver a bomb, cops say

Charles Hill Jr. cooked up a novel plot to get rid of his pesky wife, cops say. They claim he advertised for an "intelligent" man to deliver the lady a pipe bomb.

"Needed. Tough Irish Man intelligent. To handle confidential assignment. Must be free to travel. Will be well-paid. Must have U.S. passport. Call after 6 PM," the ad read.

Police say Hill met a man through the ad, which ran in the newspaper Irish Voice, and offered him a job. He wanted the guy to deliver a tape recorder wired with explosives to his wife, according to authorities.

The 54-year-old Long Island, N.Y., man was arrested when the man who answered the ad went to police.

Hill has been charged with possession of a weapon and criminal solicitation and facilitation.

MODERN-DAY 'DR. DOOLITTLE' IS ALIVE AND WELL IN AFRICA

Witch doctor talks with the animals

By IRWIN FISHER

An African witch doctor says he can converse with animals like a modern-day Dr. Doolittle, news services report.

"It sounds glamorous but there's really not all that much too it," Nkomo Mabula, 36, told reporters who visited him in a remote village just north of Nairobi, Kenya.

"The animals talk about their aches and pains and not much more. It's like sitting around with a bunch of old women. They gripe and moan about the way they feel — then they gripe some more."

Mabula says he was a boy of six when he realized that the grunts, groans, cries and howls of animals had real meaning.

Over the years he learned to mimic their sounds. And he eventually found that he could communicate with them on a basic level.

"It was exciting at first but the novelty sure did wear off," said Mabula. "Animals have a very limited range of thought and emotion. They are also very self-centered.

"The giraffes are forever talking about their throats being sore or dry. Lions can't stand the heat and almost always have a headache.

"The hyena scavenges for food and usually eats nothing but spoiled or rotten meat. But they go on and on about their heartburn and wonder why they can't get rid of it."

According to Mabula, here's what other animals have on their minds:

● Elephants suffer from inferiority complexes and often feel depressed.

● Wildebeests think they are ugly, say their feet hurt, and they envy the beauty of gazelles.

● Hippos endure chronic gas pains and itchy noses.

Giraffes gripe about sore throats, hippos have gas, and lions can't take the heat!

wrinkled and saggy. They also have frequent toothaches and bad breath.

● Gorillas suffer chest pains.

● Chimps get the equivalent of tennis elbow — and lower back pain.

Mabula has been called a crackpot in some circles but several scientists think that he really does communicate with the animals.

One, Nairobi-based psychologist Julius Kadhi, said: "I don't think Mr. Mabula talks to animals like you and I talk to each other, but I do believe that he is able to understand what they have on their minds.

"It's probably more of an instinct than anything else. In a psychic sense he's a very sensitive human being, I'm sure.

"Nonetheless, his apparent understanding of these creatures could be quite beneficial to mankind, but only if science is willing to listen to him."

Brave mom gives up everything to get her kids back!

REUNITED at last, Carla Cloward is rebuilding her life with her precious children, Daniel, 4, and Jessica, 5.

By SUSAN JIMISON

Carla Cloward lost her savings, her job and her home, but she got something much more precious in exchange — her two adorable children who were stolen from her a year ago.

The courageous Salt Lake City, Utah, mom sacrificed everything to find and reclaim Daniel, 4, and Jessica, 5.

Woman loses job, home and savings in search for ex-hubby and children

They were allegedly kidnapped by their father following a painful divorce.

"There was a reason the judge gave me custody of the children and not him," said Carla. "I was worried about the kids. And no one was helping me get them back.

"I make barely over minimum wage. I couldn't afford an attorney. I had to do everything myself."

Carla and her husband were divorced in 1984 in Arizona and the young mom started a new life in Salt Lake City. One day last year, Carla's ex-husband appeared and asked to take the children on a three-week vacation.

Knowing that the divorce decree entitled the children's father to "reasonable" visitation rights, Carla let them go. But after three weeks, they — and their father — had disappeared.

The horrified mom went to police, but says she was told the children were okay because they were with their father.

She called the FBI, but they couldn't help until they got an arrest warrant. They couldn't get an arrest warrant until they had a police report — and there was no police report because police had not interviewed Carla.

"She had reached the end of her rope when she called me," recalled Dave Porter, an assistant for Sen. Orrin Hatch.

"I went to work on it and at last found out that the children were in Mesa, Ariz., with their father." He was living in Mesa, Ariz., with the children. Carla took the next flight.

The trip cost her all her savings and she lost her job. Because she used her rent money to pay for a motel room in Arizona, she was evicted from her home in Utah. But after waiting several days for the proper warrants, Carla finally held her babies again.

"I just couldn't believe it," she said. "I had worked so long and spent so much."

Carla's divorced husband faces charges of custodial interference.

Minister forgets funeral!

The Rev. Jonathan Stock-Hesketh left 21 miffed mourners stranded when he forgot about the funeral service he was to perform because he was busy writing his book.

Then, when furious family members confronted the Loughborough, England, minister, he refused to apologize.

"I forgot the funeral because I was up to my neck in books. We all make mistakes," snapped the 62-year-old clergyman and scholar.

"I am fed up with people who never step inside a church until someone dies and then they expect the church to rally round."

The funeral party waited in vain for Rev. Stock-Hesketh for 40 minutes at the crematorium until another minister showed up to perform the service.

The next day, relatives of the deceased showed up at the forgetful preacher's house for an explanation.

"He got extremely indignant and asked if we ever missed appointments, then he slammed his fist on the table

Parents keep teen locked in basement, say cops

By JACK ALEXANDER

A wealthy couple are accused of turning their $450,000 home into a prison from which there was no escape for a teenage daughter — who was drugged and locked in the basement for more than a year!

Barbed wire topped a fence around the spacious family home in Columbus, Ohio, and iron bars blocked any thought of escape through windows.

Prataranporn Wattanasarn, 17, was imprisoned in the basement when her parents, Padet and Nipapon Wattanasarn, left the house, said prosecutor Michael Miller.

"The girl said her parents gave her 'downers' and other drugs that caused her to be sleepy much of the time," Miller told The NEWS.

Cops went to the luxurious home after a former schoolmate of the teenager told them Prataranporn hadn't attended school for more than a year.

Her parents, both doctors and natives of Thailand, told police officers their daughter was "out of the country visiting relatives," said Miller.

"As the officers started to leave, they heard the girl screaming and went upstairs to find her mother pulling her by the hair down a hallway," said the prosecutor.

The teenager was placed in the custody of Franklin County Children Services.

"She told them about her year-long ordeal, and when police went back to question her parents, they were gone," said Miller.

The parents are being sought on misdemeanor charges of interference of custody. Miller said he will seek a grand jury indictment of the couple on felony charges of endangering children.

Miller said the teenager was apparently being punished by her parents because she ran away once before and had a boyfriend they didn't approve of.

Animal lovers can't stomach snake swallowing

Animal lovers hit the roof when a contestant tried to win a motorcycle in a radio competition — by swallowing a whole snake!

The contest, sponsored by Ogden, Utah's station KJQ, asked listeners "What's the Craziest Thing You Would Do for a Motorcycle?" and the reptile-gobbling routine was the stunt Ron Stewart came up with.

Stewart lost the contest to Jenise Merril, 21, who covered herself in liquid cow manure and rolled in cornflakes. But he won a lot of attention from animal-protection groups who protested he was being cruel to the snake.

"If people want to make idiots of themselves, that's their business," fumed Katherine Brant, director of development for the Utah Humane Society. "But when it involves animals who can't defend themselves, that's when we step in."

Woman gets littering ticket — for tossing away a pickle!

A 28-year-old woman tossed a hamburger pickle out the window — and got a ticket for littering!

"I stopped to have lunch at Burger King, ordered a hamburger and took the pickle, no bigger than a quarter, off the sandwich as I was driving along a side street," said Brenda Buehler of West Carrollton, Ohio.

"I kept the rest of the trash in my sack, but I thought I would just throw this pickle out the window."

She did — and was promptly pulled over by a police cruiser.

"The officer got out of his car and asked to see my driver's license," said Miss Buehler. "I asked why. He said, 'For littering.' I said, 'You consider throwing a pickle out the window littering?'

"He said, 'Yes, ma'am.'"

A spokesman for the police department in Clinton Township, Ohio, where the ticket was issued, said Miss Buehler was cited under a 1987 law that defines litter as "garbage, trash, waste, rubbish, ashes, cans, bottles, wire, paper, cartons, boxes, automobile parts, furniture, glass or anything else of an unsightly or unsanitary nature."

The spokesman said a pickle is covered by that definition, but Miss Buehler isn't buying it — and has requested a jury trial in hopes of beating the rap.

DIET DISCOVERY ASTOUNDS SCIENTIFIC COMMUNITY!

In what is being acclaimed a "major breakthrough", a group of European scientists have recently discovered a powerful new weight-loss formula that causes rapid weight loss without dieting. The discovery was made while researchers at the University of Kuopio, in Finland, were searching for a compound to lower cholesterol. In a test group of people who took the formula, cholesterol levels remained unchanged but doctors were astounded to find that every patient had lost a significant amount of weight!

ACTUALLY SUPPRESSES ABSORPTION OF CALORIES!

Medical researchers quickly discovered that this new formula actually alters the way your body digests food. When taken before mealtime it bonds with the food you eat and "ties up" calories, preventing their absorption. So a substantial portion of the ingested calories pass through and out of the digestive system unabsorbed. Even though you eat as much as you want, a rapid weight loss occurs, as your body burns fat to replace those lost (unabsorbed) calories.

CLINICALLY TESTED

Further medical tests of the new formula have been made in Sweden at Sahlgrens Hospital, University of Gotenborg. Results published in the BRITISH JOURNAL OF NUTRITION stated: "Body weight was significantly reduced during the study even though the patients were specifically asked not to alter their dietary habits." This new compound is so powerful, so effective and so relentless in its attack on bulging deposits of fatty tissue that it has virtually eliminated the need for dieting or torturous exercise."

PROVEN SAFE/EFFECTIVE

After exhaustive testing, the new compound was determined to be safe and was formulated into one of the most effective weight-reducing pills of all time. This revolutionary formulation is being marketed in the United States under the trade name Cal-Ban 3000™. It is now available without a prescription from Anderson Pharmacals, which holds exclusive North American rights to Cal-Ban 3000™. Cal-Ban 3000™ is derived from a 100% natural plant source and contains no drugs or stimulants.

EAT ALL YOU WANT AND KEEP LOSING!

Cal-Ban 3000™ allows you to continue to eat and enjoy as much of your favorite foods as you want. All you have to do is to remember to take your Cal-Ban 3000™! Within hours your body's fat cells will start to shrink. You'll be amazed at how fast measurable results can be seen! Some best case histories report losing up to 8 pounds of fat and fluid in the first 72 hours! Dissolving away up to 15 pounds the first week and dropping up to 40 pounds of fat the first month! Others have continued to lose up to 50, 60 and 80 or more pounds.

Big Brothers can ban gays

A California court has ruled that the Big Brothers organization has a constitutional right to ban homosexuals from its program!

The case stemmed from a suit filed in 1984 that claimed Big Brothers of Greater Los Angeles banned a bisexual man from acting as a counselor.

The organization, which operates coast to coast, provides fatherless boys with adult male role models who volunteer for the jobs.

In rejecting the suit, a Los Angeles Superior Court Judge ruled Big Brothers of L.A. has the right to promote its own value system, which holds that homosexual men are inappropriate role models for young boys.

Man kills sis for marrying Moslem

Newlywed Lubna Zeidan was gunned down in a hail of bullets by her brother, cops said — because she married a Moslem.

The victim's 17-year-old brother, a Jordanian Christian immigrant, was enraged when he learned about the wedding, San Francisco cops said.

"I don't know how it happened," said heartbroken father Hikmat Zeidan. "I asked my son how it happened, and he said, 'I lost my mind.'"

I wish space aliens would kidnap my rotten brats!

Address your letters to Editors, Weekly World News, 600 South East Coast Ave., Lantana, FL 33462. We reserve the right to edit your letters.

Editors: I was furious after reading in your November 1 issue about how space aliens are kidnapping Earth children.

When I think about all the sweet, lovable, cuddly kids that are getting swiped and I'm left with my two crummy, troublemaking brats, I could explode.

It just goes to show that space aliens are like cops — there's never one around when you need one.

Please include my address at the end of my letter. That way if aliens are monitoring your paper they'll know where they can go to pick up two more Earth children. By the way, their names and ages are Tommie, 7, and Claudie, 9. — D.R.E., Buffalo, N.Y.

It's nice of you to volunteer your two unruly children, but Earth doesn't need spoiled brats as ambassadors. If you stopped praying for a kidnapping and took a strap to your kids, you might find that you solved your problem all by yourself. — Editors

Dwarf has a right to be tossed

Editors: I was moved by the story about the little person David Wilson who works as the dwarf in dwarf-tossing contests.

I'm sure there are lots of people who are outraged by these contests. But I think Mr. Wilson is doing the right thing. Lord knows, it's not easy for little folks to get a good job or even to be treated decently in this world.

HUMAN shotput David Wilson gets ready for a launch.

He has found a way to put his size to his advantage. Some folks might consider it demeaning, but like Liberace used to, Mr. Wilson is laughing all the way to the bank. — Mrs. G.W.R., Newark, N.J.

How right you are. The same "normal" people who criticize David for participating in dwarf tosses would probably be the first to deny him a regular job in their store or bank or business. After all, this is America, and we are supposed to be able to choose our own jobs. — Editors

Housewife doesn't fret about sex

Editors: The survey where newlyweds said they had a lot more problems on their mind than sex was interesting, but not surprising.

I've been married 26 years to the same man, and I sure don't think that much about sex either.

My slob has such filthy habits that the only worry I have is that he might want to have sex. — Mrs. R.M.K., Boynton Beach, Fla.

How do I get my beau to tie the knot?

Send letters to: Dotti, Weekly World News, 600 S. East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33462

Dear Dotti: I met this darling guy two years ago and fell for him right away. I asked him out and we got along fine and I knew I wanted to spend the rest of my life with him.

After a few dates, I got him to make love to me and then I moved into his apartment a month later while he was out of town. When he came home he was surprised, but he said it was all right for me to stay.

My problem is that he has been offered a job transfer and he has accepted it — but he hasn't said a word about taking me along when he moves. I have asked him to marry me, but he won't even talk about it.

I even got his sisters and mother to talk to him about marrying me, but he won't do it. How can I get him to tie the knot? — Need-A-Plan, Needles, Calif.

Dear Need-A-Plan: Well, pushy lady, this just goes to show that you can scheme and manipulate your way into a guy's bed — but you can't force him to walk down the aisle. Let the man make his own decisions. See if he misses you after he's left town for his new job. Wait and see what he does.

That way if and when he finally does marry you, you'll know he did so because he really wanted to, not because you badgered him into it.

She hires weirdo to be the maid

Dear Dotti: I know a guy who wants to wear skirts and do housework and I've put him to good use. He cleans my apartment three times a week and does my other chores, too.

My husband thinks it's weird that I let my friend hang around with me, but I don't mind at all. He's a great cook and he's very neat. He irons my husband's shirts better than I do and he keeps my apartment spotless.

He's also very good company. He's a lot of fun to be with and he's a great listener.

He's not gay, he's not a transvestite and he's not a transsexual. He just likes to wear skirts and do housework. He's a very nice person and I'm glad he's my friend. — Skirting the Issue, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Skirting: Let's face it. If your husband invited his gal pal in to do the cleaning and let her dress up in his clothes, you'd probably feel a little jealous, too.

Save the wear and tear on your apparel — and on your marriage — by hiring a maid.

I've got one man too many

Dear Dotti: I am married and have a lover and I love them both. I don't want to lose my husband and I don't want to give up my lover. What should I do? — Too Much Love, Little Rock, Ark.

Dear Too Much: By all means, dump your husband. You don't have to give him up — just give up the idea of marriage.

You are obviously too much of a runaround to restrict yourself to the monogamy that your marriage vows hold you to.

Who knows, you may experience even more love once you are divorced. You could have your husband, your lover and a couple dozen other lovers, too! I mean, why limit yourself?

Stupid gals don't appreciate me

Dear Dotti: I hate to turn to a woman with my problem, but I don't have anywhere else to turn.

For some reason that I cannot understand, nobody likes me. I'm 42 years old and good-looking. I make lots of money, but I'm always getting into arguments with everyone. I don't mind fighting with most men, but I'm having trouble keeping my girlfriends. Now most of them are stupid, self-centered little chicks, but I put up with them and spend a lot on them. Yet they still make demands and lay down rules and insist I behave in a way that pleases them.

Well, I'm a real man and I don't let anyone push me around, especially not some bubble-headed little female who wants to sink her hooks into me for my money. Why can't I find a good woman who lets me be me? That's all I'm asking. — In Search of a Sweetheart, Montgomery, Ala.

Dear In Search: You're a real prize, you are. And obviously your "stupid" girlfriends are smart enough to catch on to what you're like and dump you — fast!

Hey bartender, there's a dead bat in my brew!

By JACK ALEXANDER

A couple of beer-drinking buddies were bellied up to the bar when one of them whipped out a dead bat, dunked it in his drink — and chug-a-lugged the brew.

Fun-loving miner Stanley Connley had found the filthy, germ-infested creature in an abandoned mine near Austin, Nev.

"He tied the thing around his neck with a piece of string and took it with him to the International Hotel lounge," said Lander County Sheriff Steve Bishop. And that's when the fun began.

Connley, 26, sat at the bar downing beers with his pal, Richard Parker, "with that nasty bat dangling from his neck," said Sheriff Bishop.

"All of a sudden, Connley grabbed the bat, dipped it in his glass of beer, nibbled on the bat's ear and drank his glass empty," continued the sheriff.

Susan Robinson, the bartender, scooped up the bat with a paper towel, tossed it in a garbage can and told Connley to hit the road.

But then there was a new twist to the story.

The shocking incident might have ended right then if Parker hadn't suggested the rodent be tested for rabies.

"He thought his buddy Connley may have dipped the bat in his beer while his back was turned," said Sheriff Bishop.

The bat was retrieved from the garbage can and sent to a state lab for testing. It was, indeed, rabid.

Both men and a woman who had contact with one of them are taking a series of six painful rabies vaccinations as a precaution at Battle Mountain Hospital.

No charges were filed against Connley. "I think he's learned that dead bats and beer don't mix," said Sheriff Bishop.

Bank teller sniffs out missing cash

A bank teller who absentmindedly forked over $25,000 instead of $250 put police on the scent — when he remembered the customer smelled just like a Chinese restaurant!

The customer had been sent to the Lakeside bank in Chicago to get $500 in change — half in $1 bills and half in coins.

But instead of $1 bills, the teller counted out 250 $100 bills!

When the mistake was discovered, the teller couldn't remember the name of the customer, but he recalled that he smelled like a certain Chinese restaurant that he had been to.

The teller was able to pick the exact eatery in Chinatown — the Three Happiness Restaurant — and cops recovered the money from a busboy employed there.

Birds stir up a peck of trouble

Woodpeckers are causing a peck of trouble in the San Bernardino Mountains of Southern California.

Homeowners complain the feathered fiends are turning their wooden cabins into sieves. And decoys — like rubber owls or snakes — to scare them away just don't work worth a darn.

"My wife and I come up here to rest," said one homeowner, "but at 6 a.m. the woodpeckers sound like a bunch of jackhammers knocking away at the side of the house."

The noisy nuisances drill holes in the sides of wooden houses and then stash their winter supply of acorns into the openings.

"Nothing works but shooting them," sighed another resident, "but these are redheaded acorn woodpeckers — and they're a pro-

One morning while Luciano sat at his son's bedside, dark-haired Massimiliano regained consciousness.

"I have been somewhere else, a place very different from here," the boy said. "It was a place that I've never seen before, not even in books. It was Paradise and I met people who have been dead for a long time. I was perfectly healthy and I felt peaceful, contented.

"All around me there was so much light. It was so clear and glowing and I heard the sweetest music that followed me wherever I went.

"I walked along and suddenly I was standing in front of my grandparents — my grandparents whom I have never known before. I recognized them immediately, they were the same faces that I have seen in the photograph we have at home."

Massimiliano spoke in glowing terms of his visit with his grandparents — of their history, the games they played with him, the songs they sang. He had learned by heart a favorite song of his grandmother's, a little lullabye in her native Neopolitan dialect which Massimiliano had never heard.

"I remember my mother singing the lullabye to me when I was a baby," said Luciano. "I never sang it for Massimiliano, yet he knew it word for word after he came back from his coma.

"Something happened in those three months he was unconscious — something that proves to me there's a life after death. My son was with my dead parents for a long, long time. I'm sure he met them in heaven and that they sent him back for my sake."

Penniless mom makes heartbreaking decision

By SUSAN JIMISON

I sold my baby so he wouldn't be poor

Anguished housewife Roseline Levistre will never know her second son — because she sold him so the child could live a life of luxury.

The impoverished mother from Rouen, France, received $7,000 from a wealthy German couple when the baby was taken from her at the moment of birth. Now she says she'll go to her grave with a broken heart, never knowing the infant she carried for nine tragic months.

"I never even got a glimpse of my son," the 22-year-old woman said. "And now I'll never be able to see him. I have been left alone with my remorse.

"Yes, I sold him. I wasn't able to give him enough to eat.

"I am poor, my husband doesn't work, we have another son only a year old. By selling my baby, I thought I was doing something good for him — but now my life is destroyed."

Roseline and her husband Francois, 44, had been happily looking forward to raising a family, but misfortune reduced them to poverty. Francois lost his job as a mechanic just before the couple's first son, Elyan, was born.

Then — when Elyan was just three months old, Roseline discovered she was pregnant again and the couple were plunged into the depths of despair.

"The idea of another baby, another mouth to feed terrorized my husband," Roseline said. "Francois spoke about getting an abortion, but I was firmly opposed to that. The idea of killing my own child was horrible to me. I said I'd rather give him away to a couple that couldn't have kids.

"Francois said, 'Maybe that is the solution. If we give our child to a couple who wants him, we will save him from poverty.

" 'He'll have everything that we can't give him.' "

Roseline and her husband contacted a radio station and announced their willingness to part with their unborn baby. Within hours they were flooded with calls and letters. One came from a German couple who invited the Levistres to come to their home and see how their baby would live.

The desperate parents traveled to Germany and signed papers there agreeing to give up their baby.

A few months later the child, a little boy, was born in a clinic in Spain and immediately given to his new German parents.

"I tried to look at him but they took him away," said the heartbroken mom.

"I wanted to cry, but I couldn't. I had signed that contract in which I renounced my own son forever. I got $7,000 but now I suffer horribly because of my decision."

SAD mom Roseline Levistre now regrets selling her son.

Superglue puts singer's smile back together

Actor Adam Faith proved the maxim — the show must go on — when he broke his tooth while waiting in the wings, but went on stage anyway after fixing his tooth with superglue.

Starring in the musical Budgie in a London, England, theater, Faith was giving a performance with Princess Anne in the audience when bad luck struck.

He was chewing a throat lozenge while waiting for his entrance and cracked off his tooth.

"Isn't it just typical — singing before a Princess — and I go and break a flipping tooth," he said.

Faith made good his performance, but was unable to greet the Princess backstage after the show because he had to rush off to find a dentist to repair the tooth.

"He was very disappointed at not meeting Anne, but the show must go on and he had to get his tooth fixed as fast as possible," said a play spokesman.

All the players had a leg to stand on — but just one — as Seattle battled El Salvador in the recent Amputee Soccer International World Cup tournament in Woodinville, Wash. Crutches flew as two opposing players scramble for the ball early in the match. At right, Seattle captain Fadl Khalil celebrated his team's lone goal in a 3-1 loss to the defending champs. "The victory is in how you play, and we won," said Khalil after the match. The gutsy El Salvador players are former soldiers who lost legs to landmines in their country's civil war. Garbage on his patio drives oldster to kill!

Raving mad retiree James Stewart grabbed his gun and went hunting for the culprit after finding garbage on his apartment patio — and blew away an innocent victim.

By JACK ALEXANDER

He stormed into the apartment manager's office and gunned down Irma Burgess, 38, a rental agent who knew nothing about his garbage problem.

"He was like a man possessed," said the prosecutor at Stewart's trial in Vancouver, B.C., Canada. "And he took his anger out on Mrs. Burgess."

Stewart, 70, was convicted of second-degree murder and sentenced to mandatory life in prison by Judge Duncan Shaw. He won't be eligible for parole for 10 years.

The angry old man had complained earlier about the garbage to manager Sonia Redmond.

"He was so enraged I felt he would have struck me," she testified.

When she ordered Stewart from her office, she said he shouted, "You've caused me problems before. You're not going to live through today!"

Mrs. Redmond said she was drinking tea in Mrs. Burgess' adjoining office later in the day when Stewart walked into the reception area with something under his arm.

"I automatically knew it was a rifle," she testified. "He brushed past the reception desk and went to my office.

"I said to Irma, 'He's come back to kill me. He's got a rifle.'

"I picked up the phone and called 911. Irma went to the door and I asked her to close it.

"I heard Sandy, the receptionist, say, 'No sir, please don't do this.'

"He said, 'Get over there,' and then a shot was fired," Mrs. Redmond said.

"Irma had been standing by the door. There were splattered wood fragments and her right side erupted. She twirled around making strange faces and collapsed."

Gutsy office worker Patricia Miller, 29, confronted the gun-toting madman in the hallway and wrestled the rifle from him.

Stewart fled from the apartment office and was arrested later by police.

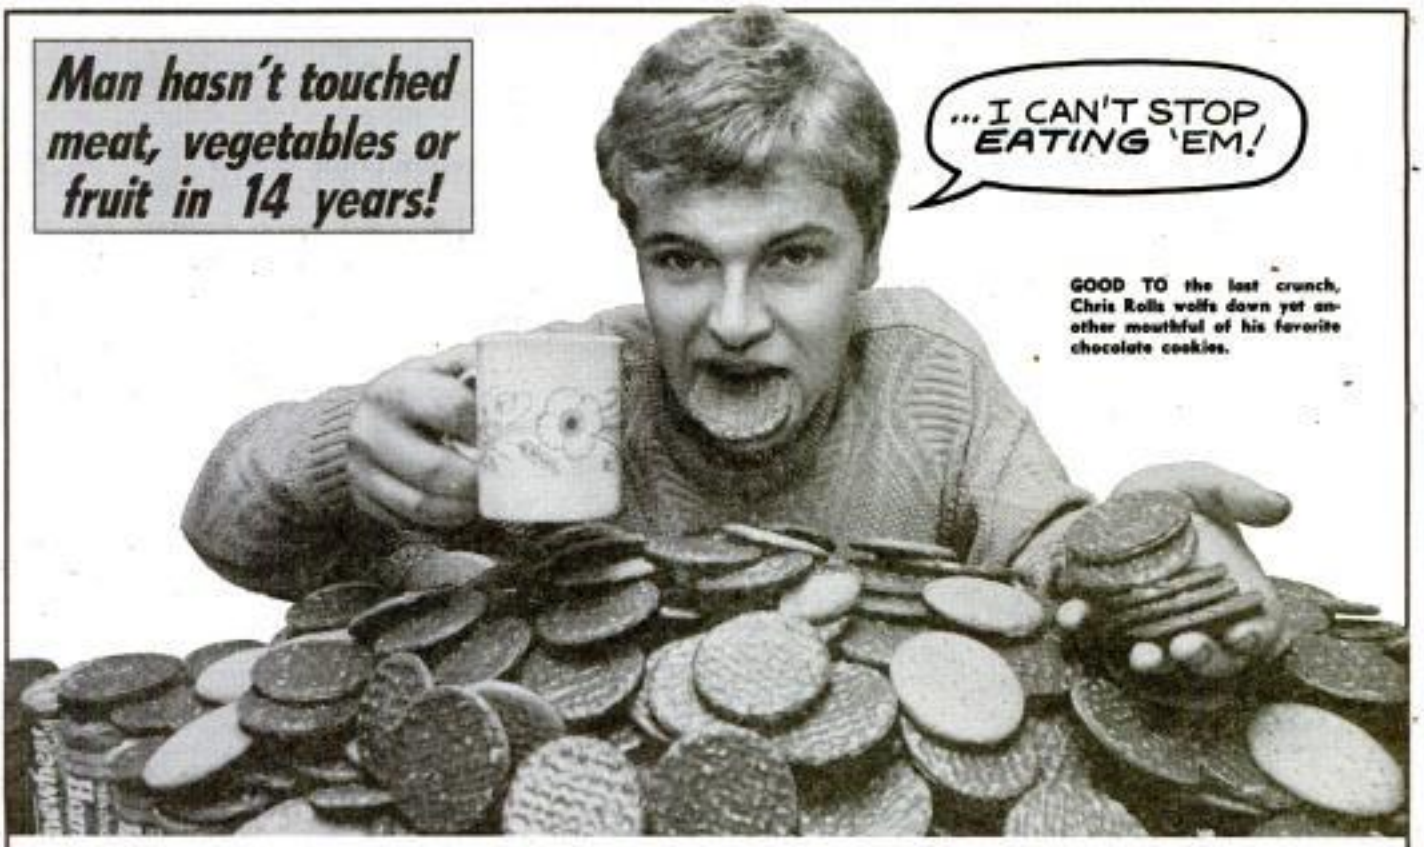
Man hasn't touched meat, vegetables or fruit in 14 years!



GOOD TO the last crunch, Chris Rolls wolfs down yet another mouthful of his favorite chocolate cookies.

HUMAN COOKIE MONSTER

By JOE BERGER

Sweet-toothed student Chris Rolls has stayed as slender as a sprinter and as healthy as a horse — though he's eaten nothing but chocolate cookies since 1974!

For the past 14 years, cookie-crunching Chris has turned up his nose at meat, veggies, fruit and all the other edibles that are supposed to make a fellow grow up big, strong and healthy.

Instead, 25-year-old Chris has crammed down cookies for breakfast, cookies for lunch and cookies for dinner — always washing them down with a cup of hot tea.

"If the experts were right, I should be as big as a barn by now," the string bean bachelor told reporters in Merthyr Tydfil, Wales.

"They say my teeth should be falling out on the floor by now, too. But my doctor says I'm fit as a fiddle and so are my teeth.

"I've proven you can eat whatever you want and still be healthy."

Carefree Chris became a cookie-kooky kid at the age of 11 when he got his first taste of the store-bought brand that's become his sole source of survival. "Once I tried my first chocolate-baked cookie, I never wanted to eat anything else — and to tell the truth, I never did," he recalled.

"My mother thought all those cookies were going to kill me, but there wasn't much she could do about it."

Chocolate-gobbling Chris is able to put away about 50 cookies a day — wolfing down a grand total of 4,250 calories.

His only concession to common sense is the single vitamin pill he pops each morning with his cookie-and-tea breakfast. The junk-food junkie insists he'll stick with his daffy diet till his dying day if he can.

"It's perfect for a bachelor," he says. "It costs me $1.50 a day to eat and I don't have to cook a thing.

"But best of all, when you eat like I do, there are never any dishes to wash."

Shocking end to lovers' spat

A lovers' quarrel ended in death for a deputy sheriff, who fell off the running board of his girlfriend's car when she hit the brakes — and cracked his skull wide open.

Jasper Fuquay, 38, had jumped up on the running board of his fiancee Judy Green's Ford Bronco and was pounding on the window as she cruised along at 25 m.p.h.

When she abruptly slammed on the brakes, cops in Raleigh, N.C., said Fuquay was thrown to the pavement.

He died later of massive

Lottery-mad mom accused in bank robbery!

By JACK ALEXANDER

A desperate mother of three robbed a bank so her hubby wouldn't find out she'd gambled away their life savings on lottery tickets, cops say.

Tearful housewife Ann Howard, 36, was arrested and taken to jail in Grant, Mich., as her three teenage children were returning home from school.

"She's not your average criminal," Police Chief Stan Osmolinski told The NEWS.

"We believe she was afraid her husband would discover she had squandered about $1,000 of their savings on the lottery," the officer explained.

Mrs. Howard, whose only brush with the law was a speeding ticket years ago, walked into the Grant City Bank, Chief Osmolinski said, and handed a teller a note that read, "I want all your money. Give me the $100s and $50s first. I have a gun."

The teller handed over "about $10,000" and pressed the silent alarm. Another bank employee got the license number of the getaway car. Mrs. Howard was arrested just two hours later at her trailer home. A pellet gun was found at the scene, and money was scattered throughout her bedroom.

"We recovered the money," said Chief Osmolinski. "She admitted being so nervous during the robbery she didn't think her legs would hold up.

"Her husband, Glenn, isn't surprised that she had spent their savings," said the chief. "But her friends and neighbors are in shock. This isn't something that happens every day in a town of 700."

Mrs. Howard's daughters watched in tears as their mother was arrested and led silently to a waiting squad car, neighbors said.

The woman's lawyer, Douglas Springstead, said she was at her wit's end, driven by a need for money.

"She was unable to explain her motive for this," he said. "I asked what went on in her mind and she said, 'If I knew what went on in my mind, nothing would have happened.' It's totally out of character for this woman."

Mrs. Howard is being held in the Montcalm County Jail on $50,000 bond, charged with armed robbery.

Cancer patient keeps her goat

A woman who fought city hall for the right to keep a goat in her backyard won the battle by proving she was simply following doctors' orders — to drink goat's milk!

Zoning officials in Oyster Bay, N.Y., gave cancer patient Lynne Cooper permission to keep the goat at her home for two years because she needs a daily quart of goat's milk.

"She did present some pretty convincing medical evidence that indicated the milk was very helpful to her," said zoning board chairman John O'Leary.

The woman told officials she has to keep the goat at her home in order to feed it a special diet that affects the milk it produces.

Why judges wear black, amazing powers of celery, & more terrific TRIVIA!

By RAFE KLINGER

Why did the ancient Romans erect statues of their heroes with removable heads? How many eggs can a good laying hen deliver in a year? Where did the U.S. get the money to buy the Louisiana Purchase?

The surprising answers to these and many more brainteasing trivia are in the following list of incredible and astonishing facts:

LEAPING leopards are the only big meat-eaters that attack their prey from treetops.

● Butterflies are pretty, but they don't grow. It's the caterpillar that grows and changes into an adult butterfly.

● When the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock, they found a hidden cache of grain in a deserted Indian village. The villagers had apparently been wiped out by smallpox. No one knows how they contracted that disease.

● Breast-feeding is supposed to make babies healthier, but an expert claims it has a benefit in later life by also making them less likely to be overweight.

HARDWORKING hens lay more than 200 eggs a year.

● Want to lower your blood pressure? Medical reports say celery lowers it, but stay away from licorice, which raises it.

● Polyester clothes are supposedly easier to care for, but market surveys reveal that more than 80 percent of men prefer cotton duds.

● Folks living in the southern parts of Russia like watermelon as much or more than U.S. southerners.

● Do hens lay an egg a day? Nope, but today's specially-bred layers can drop some 250 eggs in a year — and that's no yolk.

● The Japanese have come up with a high-tech mini-temple for religious-minded moderns. It's a Buddha altar with special sensors that triggers a recorded chant when a human is near. The sensors are tuned to a body's temperature.

● Even the ancient Romans knew that the public was fickle when it came to heroes. That's why the statues they made of their famous men had detachable heads, so they could be replaced by the new face in the crowd.

● The beautiful love ballad If Ever I Would Leave You from Camelot was written by Alan Jay Lerner shortly after his wife left him.

● Davy Crockett wasn't just a tough customer at the Alamo, he was also a pretty wild guy when he represented his native Tennessee in Congress. Davy actually proposed that booze be sold in the Capitol Building.

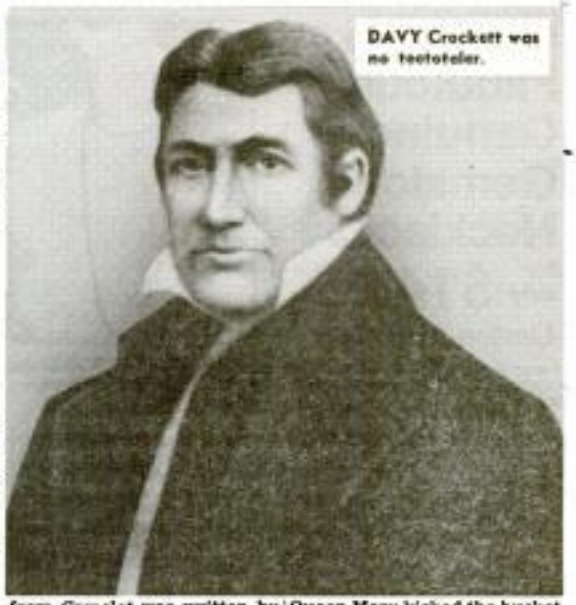
"Congress allows its members to have lemonade, charged off as stationery," said Davy. "I hereby move that whiskey be allowed under the item of fuel."

● Why do our judges wear black robes? When England's Queen Mary kicked the bucket in 1694, her hubby King William III decreed that all members of his court wear black mourning robes.

The judges never took theirs off.

● Only one major meat-eating beast can climb high in trees and attack its prey by leaping down from above — the leopard.

● In order to buy the territories known as the Louisiana Purchase from France for more than $11 million, President Thomas Jefferson borrowed the money from London banks.



DAVY Crockett was no teetoteler.

Killer says cocaine habit made him forget he committed a murder!

By PETE COOKE

A wacked-out drug addict confessed to killing his best friend — when he finally remembered committing the gory crime three years later!

Marcus Blanchard said a hypnotist helped jog his memory of the slaying shortly before he walked into the prosecutor's office in West Palm Beach, Fla., and confessed.

"His story is that he was addicted to cocaine and he didn't know he killed his friend until after he went to a hypnotist three years later," said Assistant State Attorney Laura Johnson.

"I had something in the back of my mind bothering me and I just couldn't figure out what it was," Blanchard said.

When he finally remembered the gory details, Blanchard, 24, told authorities the trouble started when he went to his friend's apartment to repay a loan.

Blanchard said he gave Randy Carpenter $1,100, half the money he owed, then lay down on Carpenter's sofa and fell asleep.

According to Blanchard's account, sometime during the night he overheard Carpenter talking to two people about killing him over the unpaid remainder of the debt.

When he woke up the next morning, Blanchard hit Carpenter over the head with a barbell and a piece of wood and then shot him with a .357 magnum.

The slaying remained a mystery for three years until Blanchard's confession.

"I just can't live with it any more," he told authorities. "I'm very sorry."

Blanchard pleaded guilty to a charge of second-degree murder and was sentenced to 25 years in prison.

Hungry hubby kills gabby wife, say cops!

By JACK ALEXANDER

A hungry hubby went berserk because his gabby wife was always talking to her mother on the phone instead of fixing his dinner, cops said — and he slit her throat!

"She's dead and I'm not sorry I did it," laborer Francesco Pansardo told police in Vareso, Italy. "It was the only way to shut her up."

Francesco returned to the couple's apartment after a hard day's work at a building site ready to sit down to a hot meal. But there wasn't any . . . and nothing was cooking.

As the angry hubby seethed with rage, his windbag wife, Maria, droned on for about 40 minutes, talking about her new dress, the neighbor's kids and a sale at a nearby department store. He was putting pasta in a pot when he heard Maria complain that he "didn't make enough money" and how they never went out, said police inspector Gaspare Maglio.

"Something snapped in his brain and he couldn't control himself," said Maglio.

Francesco grabbed a butcher's knife and slashed her throat "right in the middle of a sentence," said the inspector.

The fed-up hubby drove around in his car for about 24 hours and finally turned himself in to police.

Cops rushed to the couple's apartment and found Maria, 22, lying in a pool of blood on the living room floor. "The phone was still clutched in her right hand," said Maglio. "We had to pry it loose."

Francesco was quoted in the newspaper La Prealpina as saying his long-winded wife of eight months spent hours on the phone with her mother every day and that he "just couldn't take it anymore."

"She didn't care whether I ate or not," he said. "She would rather gab on the phone than eat when she's hungry.

"No man should have to put up with how she treated me."

Francesco was jailed without bond on a first-degree murder charge. "I think we can get the charge reduced to second-degree. There certainly was provocation," said his lawyer, Carlo Spadolini.

"The man worked hard out in the hot sun while his wife lounged around the house all day," said Spadolini. "Surely it isn't too much to ask that she get off the phone and cook his supper."

She wouldn't hang up on her mom & cook dinner!

'Alligator' sighted in Maine

An "alligator" spotted in Maine by tourists from Florida turned out to be a waterborne critter that was all bark and no bite — a floating log!

"It looked exactly like an alligator," Thomaston police dispatcher Don Dickinson said. "It had bulges where the eyes should be and everything."

The unidentified Florida couple reported seeing the gator cruising under a bridge. A subsequent police search, however, turned up only the look-alike log.

European dermatologists discover:

Nature's cure for dry skin

New York, N.Y. (Special): Now there's new hope for over half the people in this country who complain about dry skin, particularly severely dry skin on the face, hands and body: Sensitive, irritated areas... cracking, parched-for-moisture areas... embarrassing flaky patches... unsightly blotchy patches... rough, red, itching areas... wrinkles, stretch marks, intimate areas.

Ordinary moisturizing creams can only partially help because they answer only one of the problems—moisture. Now medical opinion believes an equally important answer to dry skin problems is skin healing.

That's where the "Miracle of Camomile" comes in. Now a major European health care company, after 10 years of testing, has developed a Camomile preparation so potent, it's patented. So effective, it's recommended by dermatologists and used in hospitals throughout Europe. It does more than smooth and soften. It does more than moisturize. This imported discovery, called CamoCare® Soothing Cream, combines intensive soothing and softening care with critical skin healing activity never before possible.

Testing shows that CamoCare®—with its uniquely potent extract of the Camomile plant—actually increases the metabolism of the skin. This means it promotes the skin's own healing powers, thereby activating the natural cell and tissue regenerative process. So skin literally repairs itself, restoring its smooth, moist, radiantly healthy appearance. Your skin never felt so good and looked so healthy.

"Nothing comforts my sensitive skin like CamoCare," said one satisfied user. "I had these blotchy red patches—now they're gone," said another enthusiastic user. "My skin was so dry it itched something awful," said another. "What a relief to find CamoCare."

CamoCare® Soothing Cream and other fine CamoCare® products imported from Europe are now available in the U.S. at leading health food stores. If not, use coupon below.

Judge gives hubby second chance — to kill his wife, say cops!

By RAFE KLINGER

Despite testimony by authorities that violent ex-husband Robert Brownlee was likely to attack his ex-wife again, the judge let him out on bail — and tragedy followed.

Brownlee, a 38-year-old car salesman in West Palm Beach, Fla., hid out in the apartment of his ex Joy Golamb and when she came in with a friend, he tried to shoot her, wounding the friend instead.

When that failed, Brownlee turned a gun on himself and died with a bullet to the head.

"I feel very angry at the system, the judicial system," said an annoyed Miss Golamb.

Also angry were Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office officials who tried to prevent Brownlee's release on bail after he nearly strangled Miss Golamb in his first attack.

"Deputies tried to testify on her behalf that we felt she was at risk with him free, that he was a real threat," said sheriff's spokesman Bob Ferrell.

Miss Golamb said her ex-husband's murderous behavior was due to his possessiveness towards her.

"He told me that if he couldn't have me, nobody would," she said.

A day after he nearly strangled her to death during his first attempt on her life, Brownlee was freed from jail by a judge who released him into the custody of a friend.

The release was over the objections of sheriff's deputies.

"It's so frustrating when you do your best to protect the woman, and the court system takes a very lackadaisical attitude about the situation," said Sheriff's Sgt. Lou Sessa.

Deputies guarded Miss Golamb for the three days she was in the hospital. After her release, she asked a friend, David Whitehead, to stay with her. It was a good decision. Whitehead ended up saving her.

Brownlee admitted himself to a substance-abuse treatment clinic, but he also started calling Miss Golamb and sending her letters in violation of his release.

Because of this, County Judge Michael Miller revoked Brownlee's bail and had him put back in jail. But then three days later, Judge Miller agreed with Brownlee's attorney to release him on $10,000 bail.

Brownlee continued to call and send Miss Golamb letters. A state's attorney filed for a hearing to revoke the bail, but the night before the hearing, Brownlee made his move.

He broke in Miss Golamb's apartment and hid there for hours waiting for her return. He was packing a .38-caliber handgun. When Miss Golamb and Whitehead returned, she went into the kitchen and he went to the bedroom where Brownlee was hiding.

"He's actually a hero," she said. "He took the bullet that was meant for me."

Thinking Miss Golamb was walking into the bedroom, the hiding Brownlee pointed the gun and fired — wounding Whitehead in the chest.

Whitehead grappled with Brownlee and succeeded in getting the gun. He ran into the living room, yelling to Miss Golamb to flee. Then he ran out of the apartment with blood pouring from his chest.

Left alone, Brownlee found a pistol Miss Golamb kept in her bedroom, and killed himself. Whitehead was released from the hospital three days later.

After 67 operations and 16 years in the hospital . . .

Man gets a new face!

NOW miracle Mark Banks says he's ready to face the world.

By JOE BERGER

Remarkable Mark Banks may not be the handsomest hunk in the world, but miracle Mark is grateful for the face he sees in the mirror — because he was born with no face at all!

As a pitiful infant 24 years ago, Mark had no ears, no eyebrows, no chin and no cheekbones. It's taken 67 excruciating operations — and a total of 16 years in the hospital — to get him ready to face the world.

HE WAS BORN WITH NO CHIN, NO EARS AND NO EYEBROWS

And though his plastic surgeons still have their work cut out for them, the brave Briton feels right at home now in London's ritziest discos — and he has little trouble charming the socks off the loveliest of ladies.

"Girls are attracted to guys who can make them laugh, and I never have had any trouble making them laugh," the impish playboy told reporters. "They seem to like me."

Even Mark's devoted mother Carol is impressed by his wizardry with women. "He's so fussy about which girls he goes out with," said the astonished mom.

"He's had some real beauties. It's amazing."

Ill-starred Mark was born with Treacher-Collis syndrome, which left him with a normal body but a face without shape or substance.

Stunned nurses were so appalled by his appearance that for a while they refused to show him to his poor parents.

"I was horrified when I first saw Mark and I thought it was the end of the world," mom Carol recalled.

"But after a few days I loved him and set about helping him."

The faceless babe was just six months old when docs began experimenting on him with revolutionary new plastic surgery techniques.

And since then, his life has been an endless string of operations as doctors struggled to give him the face that nature cheated him out of.

"The surgeons made some mistakes along the way and I haven't turned out just the way they wanted," the courageous Casanova told reporters. "But it wasn't their fault.

"They were trying a lot of things that had never been done before and they really had nothing to work with. It's hard to build a face right from scratch."

The doctors' work is far from finished, but their impatient patient is no longer hiding from the world. Nowadays he's taking his face of metal plates and plastic to town — and having a ball.

TRAGIC Mark before last operation.

Zoot suits are back!

The zoot suit — that bizarre World War 2 men's clothing fad — is making a comeback, New York fashion experts say.

And that's "all root" with the hep cat clothier who created the flashy duds that featured a thigh-length jacket with wide, padded shoulders and baggy-kneed trousers with narrow cuffs.

Now a 77-year-old retiree in Siesta Key, Fla., Harold C. Fox designed and sold the first zoot suit at his Chicago store in 1939.

The style quickly caught on with hip youngsters after it was adopted by such jazz greats as Louis Armstrong, Duke Ellington, Stan Kenton and Woody Her-

HONEYMOONERS JAILED!

Newlyweds Roger and Tamara Lynn McGee got into a drunken fight and were booked into jail on their wedding night, say cops.

"The whole thing started when Mrs. McGee and another woman got into an argument in front of a house and started to fight," said a spokesman for the police department in Lorain, Ohio.

"As far as we can tell Mr. McGee tried to restrain his wife. Then they came to Mrs. McGee's aid. When officers arrived Mr. McGee and that guy were going at it in the street."

According to reports, officers tried to stop the fight. But McGee, 28, struggled and was arrested on charges of disorderly conduct, intoxication, resisting arrest and assault on a police officer, cops said.

Mrs. McGee, 19, also refused to cooperate and was jailed on charges of disorderly conduct, intoxication and Farmers will get $750Gs for their electric cows!

A Michigan couple will get $750,000 because their dairy cows suffered reproductive and behavior problems caused by electricity leaking from a nearby power line.

A Grand Rapids court mediator ordered Consumers Power Co. to make the payment to the dairy farmers and gave the utility 90 days to stop the leakage from the power line.

The stray electricity caused the cows to act in strange ways, such as drinking their own urine.

The weird behavior by the electrified cows has hampered milk production on the Plainwell farm of Paul and Judy VanDenBerg since the mid 1970s.

Hot dog man relishes those caviar franks!

Hot dog vendor Bob Stiglich believes you can teach an old dog new tricks — so he serves his red-hots smeared with caviar.

Patrons at Bob's tiny Let's Dog It restaurant in Chicago don't have to spread fish eggs on their lunchtime hot dogs, of course.

But if they want caviar, it's there — along with the more traditional toppings like mustard, onions, catsup and relish.

Obviously, putting caviar on a hot dog gives a new meaning to the term "high-priced spread." Bob's menu offers three kinds — salmon golden eggs for $7 an ounce, American sturgeon for $12 an ounce and Caspian sturgeon for $20 an ounce.

Women drivers are tricked by highway rapist

A tricky creep convinced a woman driver that one of her tires was flat and then raped her after promising to drive her to get a repair kit.

The Mississippi Highway Safety Patrol has launched a massive hunt for the so-called "highway rapist" who reportedly has made attempts on at least four other women by trying to force them off the road or lure them into his car.

The Greenwood woman who was raped said the man forced her to pull over to the side of the road and convinced her that her tire was almost flat.

He offered to drive her to town, but instead took her to a field where she said he raped her, reported authorities.

Dentist drugs gal — with mouthwash!

Dentist Robert Gaber was forced to retire for a time from his practice after a judge sent him to the state pen for four years for sexually assaulting a female patient.

The Marlboro Township, N.J., man was convicted of feeding a 26-year-old woman an "antibacterial mouthwash" laced with a sedative and alcohol, following that with a dose of nitrous oxide gas, then making her have sex with him.

Man gets govt. disability pay — because he's gay!

28-year-old homosexual gets $110 a week in taxpayer money

By JACK ALEXANDER

Bleeding heart public officials have decided out-of-work Skye Brannegan should get a $110-a-week disability pension for the rest of his life — because he's gay.

"This man has been branded a homosexual. He is an outcast from society and no one will hire him.

"He's as crippled as if he had no arms or legs," said Dr. Alan Renouf.

Dr. Renouf is the senior member of the Administrative Appeals Tribunal in Sydney, Australia, and he's said that Brannegan, 28, is permanently incapacitated for any work.

The incredible action even shocked the secretary of the Gay Rights Lobby, Simon Donohue, who called the decision "extraordinary."

"The disability factor here would be homophobia, that is, other people's fear of homosexuals that would increase the feeling of anxiety a homosexual may already feel," said Donohue. "They couldn't possibly find that being black or a woman was a disability," he said.

Brannegan said he hasn't been able to find work since he was fired from a factory cotton weaving job in 1980.

Earlier he worked as a cleaner in Sydney and a melon picker in his tiny hometown of Bourke, but had trouble holding the jobs because he was "different."

"By being different, he means he is homosexual and at one stage was a transvestite," said Dr. Renouf.

The prejudice against hiring gays would be deeper in a remote little village like Bourke as compared to Sydney, said Dr. Renouf. But moving to a larger city to find a job would take Brannegan away from his family, whose support he badly needs, said Dr. Renouf.

Social factors often are considered when deciding if a person qualifies for a pension, said an Australian Social Security spokesman.

Dad lashes out at accused driver:

Fry the drunken bum who killed my daughter

"I want the drunken bum fried and sent to hell for murdering my daughter."

That's the kind of eye-for-an-eye justice heartbroken dad Al Palmieri wants for the man accused of drunk driving in the death of his oldest daughter, Andrea.

Jose Ramirez, 23, was arrested after his speeding car slammed head-on into a car driven by Andrea, who didn't drink booze or hang around with friends who did.

"He murdered my lovely daughter as surely as if he had put a gun to her head and pulled the trigger," said the grief-stricken father. "I want him to burn in the electric chair," he told The NEWS. "It would give me pleasure to pull the switch. The creep doesn't deserve to live."

Palmieri said he and his wife, Marie, have lived in torment since the tragic night his daughter's mangled body was pulled from the wreckage on a Brentwood, N.Y., street.

"I haven't been able to go back to work since it happened," said Palmieri. "I can't believe we'll never see her pretty face again or hear her laugh."

with injuries after the fatal accident. Cops said his car crashed into two other autos before it skidded to a stop.

"I don't want some slick lawyer to plea bargain with the district attorney and get the guy off with a light sentence," said the sorrowing dad. "I want his lights put out forever."

Andrea, 19, was the oldest of four daughters in the Palmieri family. Her little sisters "looked up to her," said her father.

"Andrea was going to get engaged," said her mother. "She didn't drink and got upset if she saw someone drinking and driving. She was a wonderful daughter, vivacious and bright."

Her boyfriend, Danny Sota, suffered a neck injury in the accident.

Palmieri, 42, said drunk drivers will continue to kill and mutilate innocent people if the courts don't make them pay the ultimate price.

Govt. expert says waif was abandoned by UFO crew!

By RAGAN DUNN

Homeless boy is a space alien!

He looks human but he has two hearts and unknown blood type!

A youngster who wandered into an East Indian village with a badly injured leg may be a space alien — who was abandoned by a UFO crew!

That's the word from government spokesman Kalipada Banswal, who claims to have created a human identity for the child so he could be adopted by a scientist in Mysore.

"The boy cannot be identified because of the sensitive nature of his background," Banswal told reporters. "But I can assure you that he is not human.

"Medical tests indicate that he has two hearts and an unknown type of blood. By his own admission he was abandoned by his own extraterrestrial friends and relatives.

"They apparently felt like his injury would slow down their exploration and study of our world."

Banswal said the government officials became aware of the boy after he turned up alone and disoriented in a farming settlement north of New Delhi on October 15.

The child had a badly injured leg and was taken to a regional clinic, where doctors determined that he had an extra heart and a blood type never before seen in a human being.

"The boy stands out here because his skin is pinkish-white, but other than that he looks like any other human being," said Banswal.

"Doctors at the clinic wisely alerted federal officials, who immediately took the boy into custody for his own protection."

Banswal said the extraterrestrial youngster was eventually taken to a government hospital where doctors treated his leg and interviewed him extensively about his background.

The official said he wasn't privy to everything doctors learned from the boy.

He was told that the youngster hails from a planet in our own galaxy, possesses no special powers other than a keen intelligence and is not considered to be a security risk.

"His progress and behavior as an adopted child will be closely monitored by our government" said Banswal, "but it appears that he's going to do just fine.

"It's hard to imagine why extraterrestrials with the technology to visit and explore Earth would abandon a child simply because he had a bad leg," he continued.

"It apparently has something to do with their belief in the survival of the fittest. Maybe that's why they are so advanced. Maybe they get rid of anybody who doesn't meet a very high standard of extraterrestrial excellence."

American officials refused to comment on reports that a scientific team from the States has jetted to India to interview the boy.

But one highly placed source within the Indian government confirmed that it has.

"We have also had inquiries from the governments of the Soviet Union and France," said the official. "Needless to say we are proceeding very carefully. The boy may not be human, but his well-being is at stake."

Thanks to a little human kindness . . .

Goose, born without feet, gets a boot out of life

Poor Andy the goose was a barnyard outcast when he was born without feet.

But a helping hand from a kindly human now has him strutting like a peacock — in his spiffy blue suede shoes!

Brainy inventor Gene Fleming gave Andy a whole new outlook on life. He fitted his little friend with a pair of size 0 baby shoes that allow him to walk, run and swim just like any other goose.

"I put foam rubber in the toes and laced 'em up nice and snug," Fleming told The NEWS from his home in Hastings, Nebr.

"I had to separate him from his mate Polly for a few weeks because I didn't want her laughing at him while he learned to walk.

"But Andy and his lady are together thanks to the kindly Fleming.

"They're hissing at each other and it sounds like true love."

Incidentally, if it looks like Andy is a bit pigeon-toed, he is — but there's a good reason for it. Fleming said, "I did that so Andy could hang on to Polly when they . . . uh . . . make love."

Fiend attacks same family 3 times

A sex-crazed sicko who months before burst into an apartment and raped a mom of five, broke into the place again and stabbed the woman's 12-year-old daughter.

Jamaica Plain, Mass., police said they have no clues as to the identity of the man. But the terrified family and their friends claim he has repeatedly attacked them.

The mother was raped in June when the creep broke through a kitchen window, crept past the children's room and into her bedroom.

A month later, the children spied a man trying to break through one of the first floor apartment's windows. The felon fled before he could be collared.

Then, last week, the pervert sneaked into the bedroom shared by the girl and her sister, 11, and tried to rape her. When she struggled, he stabbed her in the chest and fled after she screamed. The girl was reported in good condition at a local hospital.

"This is the third time that he's been back," said a family friend. "He seems to watch the house."

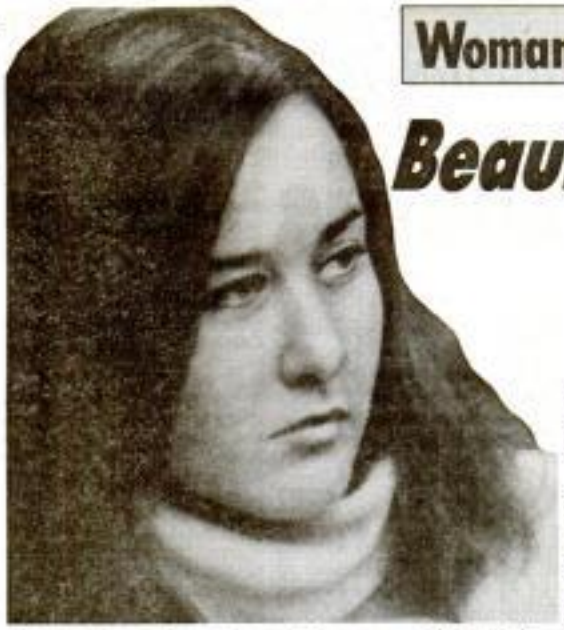
Woman starts new life after nightmare ordeal

Beauty kidnapped and locked in a box — for 7 years!



PRETTY Colleen Stan is determined to get on with her life but she's haunted by memories of her ordeal.

By SUSAN JIMISON

Colleen Stan is a young mom today, leading an ordinary life like many other women her age. But not long ago she was making headlines — as the brunette sex slave who was locked in a box for seven nightmare years.

The pretty 28-year-old woman was kidnapped nine years ago as she hitchhiked near Red Bluff, Calif. She was a naive girl just out of her teens who thought the kindly married couple with a baby who offered her a ride were harmless.

But Colleen was terribly wrong. Cameron and Janice Hooker — in their early 20s — had made a pact: He could have a love slave if she could have a baby. Colleen was their victim!

The young mill worker and his wife drove Colleen to their trailer in an isolated woods outside town. There she was blindfolded, handcuffed and gagged. They put her in a specially constructed box that blocked out all sound and light. Then, over the months that followed, she was systematically tortured and brainwashed by Hooker, 24.

"Some days he'd attach bare wires from the mains to her and electrocute her," said Christine McGuire, the public prosecutor who later tried Hooker for kidnapping, multiple counts of rape and sodomy, and a weapons charge. "Then he'd burn her with lighted matches or a light bulb."

After eight months of torment, Colleen was a broken woman. She signed an agreement with Hooker — whom she called "Master" — committing herself to a life as his slave. Janice Hooker saw it all, but did nothing. Occasionally, she participated in Colleen's torture.

Finally Colleen was permitted her freedom during the day. But each night for the seven years she lived under the spell of her master, Colleen was locked in a coffin-size box under the Hookers' bed.

Only when Janice — by now the mother of two daughters — decided she could take no more and went to police with her bizarre tale of slavery and torture did Colleen escape her agony. By then, the young woman was so brainwashed she could barely bring herself to testify against Hooker.

"I was surprised because I'd expected her to be really angry and aggressive," said Deputy District Attorney McGuire, who has written a book on the strange case called Perfect Victim (Arbor House, $18.95). "But instead she was unemotional. It was as if all the feeling had been drained out of her."

Hooker was sentenced to 104 years in prison for his crimes.

BIZARRE pact between Cameron and Janice Hooker kept woman a prisoner.

Miracle twins have two different dads!

By SUSAN JIMISON

Miracle twins Peter and Maria Haljeskorg are among the rarest kind of twins in the world — because they each have a different father!

The two 8-year-olds from Vastervik, Sweden, were conceived while their mother Irja was having an affair outside her marriage. Her husband Sten Haljeskorg was not the father of Peter. Peter was fathered by her lover, Hans Andersson, she claimed. Experts believe that the double conception occurred when the two men had intercourse with Irja in the same 24-hour period.

Shortly after Irja got pregnant, she agreed to be faithful to Sten and the couple raised the twins as their children. It was only recently that blood tests showed Peter's father was not a member of the family!

"It is a medical sensation for twins to have different fathers — only four cases are known in the world," said Dr. Jack Valentin of Stockholm, who has studied the rare twins.

The Haljeskorgs' bizarre situation became public recently when the couple went to court asking Hans Andersson, a wealthy landowner, to help support Peter.

At the hearing the couple introduced blood tests to show that Peter was actually Andersson's child, but that blonde-haired Maria, his twin, was not. The adorable twins are totally unaware of the sensation they have created in the international press. And their parents want to keep things that way.

They are planning to drop their court case to put an end to the furor it has caused so that the Haljeskorgs, the twins and their 5-year-old brother can live a normal life.

"The twins have gone through a lot and suffered so much," Sten Haljeskorg said.

Reserve as much time as possible this week for loved ones who are in need of your strength.

CANCER

June 21-July 22

The frustrations you've encountered in recent weeks should soon fade into nothingness. The success you so rightly deserve looms on the horizon.

As a Cancer you have profound psychic qualities that may influence the success of your future. Don't let that talent go to waste!

A sharing time with family, friends or that someone special could give you a better insight to the blessings life has bestowed on you.

LEO

July 23-Aug. 22

VIRGO

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Your knack for seeing through phonies and con men may come in handy this week when you or friends are approached with what seems an unbeatable opportunity. Remember, the next best thing to cashing in on a windfall is not losing out on a bad deal.

Romance comes to a halt this week as Venus veers out of your orbit. This doesn't mean a broken heart is headed your way. It just means that passion is cooling her heels for the moment.

LIBRA

Sept. 23-Oct. 22

Home life could be chock full of surprises — and some of them you may find hard to accept. But don't dig in your heels and be obstinate. Make it your aim to understand people better.

A legal matter that may have been of concern to you is on the verge of being resolved — in your favor. Be a gracious victor, though.

You may be hearing from an old — and dear — acquaintance who wants to renew the friendship. Be sociable, but be careful, too.

SCORPIO

Oct. 23-Nov. 21

You can expect the unexpected this week, so be prepared to turn any unusual situation to your own distinct advantage. However, be extra careful not to tread on any toes.

Break out of that humdrum routine you've fallen into and get out to meet some exciting new people. They'll not only help recharge your batteries, but will also provide you with a bagful of new ideas.

Health concerns may soon be resolved.

SAGITTARIUS

Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Pesky personal problems may keep you off balance this week, Sagittarius, but they will be resolved soon and usually in your favor.

Reach out to young people. Your planets indicate that bonds you make with them now will remain strong and lasting in the future. Pay special attention to the littlest ones.

Your financial situation should improve considerably in the near future. But you must make an effort to control your free spending ways.

CAPRICORN

Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Persistence, persistence, Capricorn. You can achieve a major goal soon if you just keep trying. Your stars will smile on any efforts you make now to realize your dreams.

A test of your courage may crop up as you face a challenging situation. Remember you have the support of friends and loved ones.

The time is ripe for romance. Married Capricorns may experience a reawakening of past passions and singles can look forward to new opportunities for love.

If your birthday is this week . . .

The year ahead can be one of the most rewarding of your life. You might even find it possible to achieve financial independence if you set lofty goals, work hard and take a few risks!

Luck abounds but you'll need help to take full advantage of it. Keep your eyes peeled for opportunities of all kinds and don't be afraid to ask friends or experts for their advice.

The opposite sex will find you more and more attractive as the year progresses. You'd be wise to cultivate them as friends. If single, you might even want to strike up a new

AQUARIUS

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Don't be surprised if an old friend contacts you this week with an unusual offer that could lead to financial gain. Listen carefully and seek sound advice.

Be receptive to change in the week ahead. Don't look for hidden meanings in what people say. And say what you mean in dealing with friends and relatives.

Your Aquarian capacity for tolerance may be put to the test this week when an acquaintance comes

PISCES

Feb. 19-Mar. 20

A few days away from the regular routine may be just what you need. Plan a getaway weekend so that you can relax.

Your natural Pisces sensitivity may get you too involved in someone else's problems this week. Perhaps it's time they quit leaning on you.

Pay close attention to details this week, particularly in handling personal affairs. One slight slipup now could cause lots of problems for you

Mom makes boy drink himself to death — with water, say cops!

By JACK ALEXANDER

A 6-year-old boy died after cops said his mother and her live-in boyfriend forced him to drink so much water his brain swelled up and nearly exploded.

Angela West and Jonathan Crawford were charged with manslaughter and felony child abuse in the bizarre death of her son, Christopher. They were jailed on $100,000 bond.

"The boy was forced to drink more than a gallon of water from a bucket over the course of a morning," said District Attorney Steve Balog of Burlington, N.C.

"His mother said he threw up a dozen times during the ordeal. She called police and an ambulance when he went into convulsions," said Balog.

A lawyer for Crawford, Donnell Kelly, said the boy "had eaten spoiled sherbert or bad biscuits" and they were trying to flush the rotten food out of his system.

Four months earlier, Mrs. West, 29, and Crawford, 32, were charged with allegedly forcing the youngster to drink hot sauce and eat soap and for beating the bottoms of his feet with a stick.

The charges were later dropped, and social services workers were supposed to be keeping an eye on Christopher, as well as a younger brother and sister. Christopher died about eight hours after he was admitted to Alamance Memorial Hospital.

"His brain swelled up to the point of bursting from the water. He lapsed into a coma and never came out," said medical examiner Thomas Clark. "He literally drank himself to death."

Dutch soldier left behind by forgetful commander!

NATO maneuvers had ended five days earlier, but a dedicated Dutch soldier remained stoically at his lonely post in the West German countryside — because his commanding officer had forgotten all about him.

Police Officer Siegfried Meyer said he first noticed the soldier guarding a bridge on a Monday.

"On Thursday, he was still there, although the Dutch had left the area," the cop said. "On Friday, he told me his unit must have forgotten him — and I called the military police, who came and picked him up."

In the meantime, kindly villagers made sure the soldier, Johann Romers, 19, had enough food and drink.

Loser learns that every vote counts

Every vote is important in an election — but when Herbert Connolly, 67, of Newton, Mass., lost a primary election for a statewide post by one vote, 14,716 to 14,715, he had no one to blame but himself.

He got to the polls one minute late.

She died without ever seeing her adoring son

Boy's 17-year vigil at coma mom's bedside

Sad-eyed schoolboy Tony Marlow spent 17 heartbreaking years hovering over his ailing mom's bed, praying she'd open her eyes and give him a loving hug. Instead, tragic Janet Marlow died — without ever knowing the son who adored her.

By JOE BERGER

"That's the worst part, that we never got a chance to be friends and enjoy the things other mothers and sons do together," devoted Tony told reporters in Yateley, England.

"It's something I'll always think about, always regret."

Hapless Janet lapsed into a coma in 1971 after giving birth to Tony by cesarean section. She never recovered.

From the time her heartsick son was old enough to understand the tragedy, he put in long hours at his mother's bedside — silently pleading with her to leap up and kiss him.

"It was just natural to visit, like getting dressed in the morning," the troubled teen recalled.

"Mom used to try to speak and it came out like she was crying. That used to upset me. But I never gave up hope.

"Every time I went I hoped something good would happen."

When his mom passed away recently, the tortured teen couldn't bring himself to attend the funeral.

"I wanted to, but I couldn't stand it," he said. "I didn't want to be there with all those people, so I stayed home by myself.

"The next day I went to her grave with my dog. I gave her some flowers and said a prayer."

The grieving teen, who was raised by his grandparents after his dad skipped town years ago, is convinced his mother struggled desperately to tell him she loved him.

"I spent a lot of time talking to her and I know she understood some of what I told her.

"She wanted to talk to me — she tried to talk to me — but she just couldn't."

But though his mom never got a chance to say it, devoted Tony is certain she adored him as much as he worshiped her.

"She died to give me life," he said. "She couldn't do anymore than that to show her love."

GRIEVING teen Tony Marlow holds a picture of his mom who lay in a coma for 17 years after his birth.

Sweet-talkin' granny nabs suspect

A sweet old granny used kind and loving words to smooth talk a young burglar into seeking help at a rescue mission — then told cops where to find him!

In no time at all, Fort Wayne, Ind., cops had 18-year-old Mark McIntosh behind bars, charged with burglary and resisting arrest.

"He asked me where my money was and said if he didn't get it, he would hit me," said the unidentified 88-year-old woman. "So, I asked him if he would do that to his mother, and he paused and said, 'No.' "

The young thief told her he didn't have anything to eat or a place to stay, she said.

"I put my arm around him and told him to go to the Rescue Mission, that they would help him," she explained. He left and she called the cops.

"I didn't do anything any other Christian wouldn't have done," she said.

Gal's $2.5 million lawsuit claims:

Beauty cream gave me an Adolf Hitler mustache!

By IRWIN FISHER

A furious young woman says a herbalist sold her a beauty cream that caused an Adolf Hitler-like mustache to sprout on her upper lip!

Now Maria Sosa Mena, 23, has filed a whopping $2.5 million lawsuit against Roberto Volante, claiming he was criminally negligent in preparing the skin cream that made her look like the Nazi madman and turned her into a laughingstock.

"He's made a fool out of me and he's going to pay, pay, pay," Miss Sosa Mena, a former beauty queen, told reporters in Villa Maria, Argentina.

"Everybody's laughing at me behind my back. I can't even leave my house. I look just like Adolf Hitler with this hideous black mustache.

"And shaving doesn't do any good because it just grows right back. I'll have to go through electrolysis just to get this thing off."

Volante, 55, admits that he sold Miss Sosa Mena a skin cream but denies that it caused her to grow a mustache. The herbalist says she was hairy to begin with and is now blaming him for her "genetic defect."

"My cream didn't give her a mustache — her genes did," said the herbalist.

"If I did have a hair-growing product, I'd sell it to a big pharmaceutical company as a cure for baldness and become a rich man. Unfortunately, my cream is nothing more than a mixture of herbs and vegetable juices.

"There's no way my cream could grow hair."

But Miss Sosa Mena's attorney said laboratory analysis of Volante's cream indicated that it contained at least three prescription drugs — two of which have the definite side effect of growing unwanted hair.

Said Miss Sosa Mena: "The man is a charlatan, and we're going to expose him.

"I don't want any other woman to suffer like I have."

Old lady leaves her secret millions to nursing home

Everyone at the old folks home thought C. Marita Joyce was just another resident of modest means — but when she died at 81, she left the place a mind-boggling $10 million.

Officials at the home in Dallas, Tex., said Miss Joyce lived at the home for eight years and never wore expensive gems or owned costly cars. But the woman had inherited land and money from her real estate tycoon dad 40 years before and apparently invested it wisely.

Horrified dad buries tot alive — with his bulldozer!

A heartbroken father didn't see his tiny son when he bulldozed dirt into holes left by tree stumps — and buried the little boy alive.

Three-year-old Landon Hilman had climbed into one of the holes to play with his toy tractor seconds before his dad cranked up the dozer.

Distraught dad Conrad Hilman told police in Sorrento, British Columbia, that he had earlier sent Landon and another son away from the holes, but they apparently returned when he wasn't looking.

The Canadian family found the dead youngster three hours after he was buried alive.

First Russian AIDS victim dies

The Soviet Union has just logged its first AIDS death, a 29-year-old prostitute who consorted with foreign visitors in Leningrad, the labor newspaper TRUD reports.

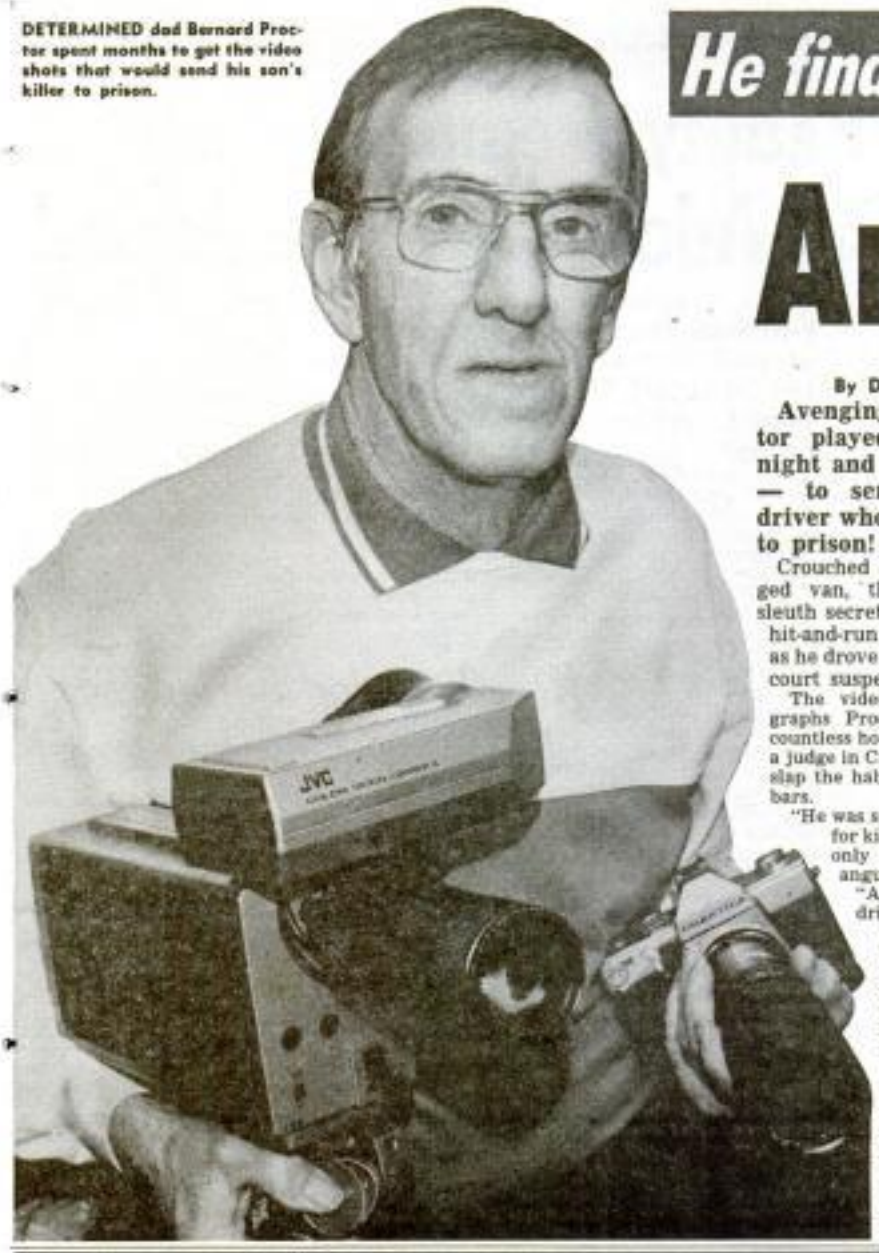
DETERMINED dad Bernard Proctor spent months to get the video shots that would send his son's killer to prison.



He finally got this video to

Angry dad

By DICK DONOVAN

Avenging dad Bernard Proctor played private detective night and day for six months — to send the hit-and-run driver who killed his son back to prison!

Crouched inside his specially rigged van, the 69-year-old amateur sleuth secretly video-taped convicted hit-and-run driver Gordon Stratton as he drove his truck in defiance of a court suspension of his license.

The video tape and other photographs Proctor had snapped in his countless hours of surveillance were all a judge in Croydon, England, needed to slap the habitual violator back behind bars.

"He was sentenced to only 12 months for killing my boy in 1982, but he only served nine months," the anguished dad told The NEWS. "And he was banned from driving for 4½ years.

"He's back in prison now, but he'll be out in nine months. Then he'll get behind the wheel and drive again . . . and then he'll kill again. Turning him loose is like putting a gun in his hand."

Stratton, now 29, was convicted of causing death by reckless driving after he struck and killed Proctor's 14-year-old son Tim in August 1982.

In 1985, after his release from jail and while still banned from driving, Stratton was involved in a drunk-driving incident. He served two concurrent six-month jail terms, paid a fine and had his license revoked for an additional year.

TEENAGE victim Tim Proctor was killed by hit-and-run driver.

"After his release, I learned that he was back behind the wheel," Proctor said. "It was then that I vowed to get the evidence needed to put him back in prison.

"It took me five months to find him.

"He had moved and was doing plastering work that had Desperate dolphin pushes boat toward dying mate

By ROSE GRADY

A frantic dolphin, crying out in anguish and despair, prodded, bumped and nudged a small fishing boat — until it followed him to where his mate lay dying in the water!

But the dolphin's desperate effort to get human help for his stricken mate was in vain. She was already dead when the fishing boat reached her side.

"But the male dolphin didn't seem to accept that his mate was dead," said Vincent Galazzo, the 66-year-old captain of the fishing boat. "He was obviously hoping we could save her.

"She probably had been hit by a power boat and she had a very deep wound. Even if she had been alive, there was nothing we could have done to save her."

Galazzo and his three-man crew were fishing in the Mediterranean off the French Riviera when the dolphin raced alongside their boat and began nudging its bow as though trying to turn the bow, then dash off in the direction it wanted the boat to take.

"He was healthy, but obviously distressed," Galazzo explained. "He was trying to attract our attention."

That conclusion was a difficult one for the seasoned old skipper to make. Like most men of the sea, he had heard many tales of dolphins helping men in peril — but never one about a dolphin seeking help from man!

"We followed the dolphin for several hundred yards," Galazzo said. "He knew exactly where he was taking us. Ahead of us was a badly injured female dolphin barely floating in the water. Her dorsal fin had been almost torn off and there was blood in the water.

"The male raced on to her and used his own body to keep her from sinking. He kept pushing her toward us, crying out to us all the time.

"The wound was very deep . . . and as we looked closer we realized she was already dead. It was very sad. We could him on a job one day and gone the next.

VIDEOTAPE taken by dead boy's father shows the convicted driver violating his probation by driving after his license was revoked. The photo prompted the judge to send him back to jail.

"I turned private detective and began following him everywhere he went. I bought a van and stacked boxes inside that would shield me when I photographed him. I had at least 12 pictures of him driving his truck, but they weren't good enough.

"I watched him night and day, hour after hour. Then one day he came out of a pub and I got a video tape of him driving away in his truck. I took it straight to the police and he was arrested the next morning."

Proctor, who owns a pop recording studio in South London, estimates he lost about $1,000 a week in playing out his role as a private eye.

"Now I have to try to get my business back on an even keel," he said. "But it was something I had to do, no matter what the consequences. But I know that my son was saying, 'Go to it, Dad,' and I know he's proud of what I did. There's no doubt about it."

Poachers slip elephants pumpkin mickeys and saw off their tusks

African ivory poachers have been sawing the tusks off slumbering elephants after feeding them pumpkins stuffed with hard drugs!

Wildlife officials in Tanzania say the bandits fill the pumpkins — a favorite snack of elephants — with chloroform and narcotics before leaving them in national parks.

Ivory poaching is a serious crime in Tanzania. But the product brings such a high price on the black market that people are willing to risk fines and imprisonment to illegally harvest the tusks.

Tanzanian government figures show that almost 1,200 illegal game hunters have been caught in the past 12 months alone.

This guy's full of beans!

Bean lover Ron Collins wolfed down 598 lima beans in 10 minutes to win the bean-eating championship at Cape May, N.J., for the second year in a row. Here he polishes off a cup full of beans while spectators watch.

Handy clue

Cops had no problem fingering Thomas James as the drunk driver who crashed his car and fled because he left a handy clue behind — his artificial hand.

James lost his right arm in a farm accident and wears an artifical hand when he drives. The hand was in the front seat of his car.

The now one-armed driver pleaded guilty to drunk driving in Stafford, England. He was fined $600 and banned from driving for a year.
